MANAGE FARM IN BUSINESS MANNER

Must Be Properly Organized to Secure the Greatest Continous Profits.

Farm management is the application of business principles to farming. A farm enterprise must be organized for the purpose of securing the greatest continuous profits. It is not enough to raise good crops or secure a large animal production; these must be produced economically. This is accomplished only when capital and labor are so adjusted to existing conditions that maximum yields are obtained at the lowest cost. Every department must be well organized and must be co-ordinated with the others. Labor must be fully employed; capital must be properly utilized; both quantity and quality of products must be secured, and the products must be wisely marketed.

In the days of our fathers the farm provided almost everything needed by the family. The few things that were not raised on the farm were received in trade from the village store. Very little money was required or handled by the farmer. The measure of his success was his ability to produce his own food and clothing, rather than the ability to organize his business and buy and sell well. Since machinery has been introduced in the factory and on the farm, money has become necessary for the farmer. No longer can he raise or trade all he needs. He must sell his products and buy most of his requirements.

All these changes mean that the farmer of today, in order to become successful, must be a business man. He not only produces, but he buys and sells. The kind of business ability needed is not only that of the trader, but also that of the executive, who can organize the farm into a successful enterprise. An idle horse in the barn is often a greater loss than a bad deal in horses. Failure is caused by poor management, as well as poor crops. The successful farmer must plan and consider his work ahead of time. He must have a plan for stormy days, as well as for field work. He must foresee most things that are about to go wrong and prevent them from going wrong.

We must not assume, however, that all farmers are ignorant and unbusinesslike. Some of them are fathers and brothers of our captains of industry, and are as efficient for their conditions as the city man is for his. The farmer is, however, slower in changing his methods and in adapting himself and his farm to meet new conditions and requirements as they arise. The more a farmer thinks, and the more his brawn is intelligently directed by his brains, the greater will be the resultant satisfaction and success.

ENORMOUS VALUE OF FOX INDUSTRY

Those in aptivity in Prince Edward Island Valued at Over Fifteen Million.

The importance of the fox industry on Prince Edward Island is well illustrated in a recent publication of The Census and Statistics Monthly, issued upon the authority of the minister of trade and commerce, and edited by the head of the statistical branch of that department. This paper contains the following interesting paragraph:

It is stated that at the present time the foxes in captivity in the Province of Prince Edward Island could not be purchased for $15,000,000. The above estimated valuation is equal to twice the value of all the cattle, horses, sheep, swine and poultry, as shown by the Canadian census of 1911, the total of which was given as $7,488,784.

The foxes representing this $15,000,000 number 3130, and are thus classed:

899 old silvers, at $10,000 each	$8,990,000
703 young silvers, at $7000	4,921,000
294 old crosses at $2000	588,000
294 young crosses	294,000

The rest of the amount is made up of cheaper foxes and the ranches, until the total of $15,186,150 is made up.

A striking illustration of the remarkable development of the industry is reached by a comparison with the value of the island's farm stock, including horses and poultry. This, according to the last census, was $7 488,784. The population of the island at the last census was 93,728, so that the value of the live stock was about $80 per head of population. The fox industry averages $162 per head of population. Prince Edward Island was famed for its farms, its horses and its cattle, but from the foregoing figures it is plainly seen that the fox industry has assumed greater proportions than any of these other industries.

NEW INVENTION WILL REDUCE TWINE PRICES

John Kennedy, a director of the Grain Growers' Grain Company of Western Canada, tells of an invention which will revolutionize the binder twine trade.

The new invention, the patent rights of which have been secured by the Grain Growers Grain Company, is for a metallic clamp for a fastener for binder twine, to do away with the necessity of knotting, and to permit of the use of cheap flax twine. This will result in the twine prices being cut in two.

All that is necessary for the alteration of binders is to remove the knotter and place the fastener on the machine. Then it will use the cheap flax twine and give perfect satisfaction. This has been demonstrated.

At present this flax twine is not made in Western Canada, but is manufactured in Minnesota.

TUBERCULOSIS IS FOUND IN POULTRY

Tuberculosis is a disease affecting only old birds, or birds that are fully matured. The germs of this disease may be in the ground surrounding the poultry house, or in the house itself. They gain entrance thru the food, drinking water or by breathing. Birds which are suffering from this disease void the germs in the droppings, and these, getting mixed with the feed, are taken by the other birds, and the disease is spread thru the flock. The symptoms of this disease are a pale comb, the bird loses flesh rapidly, usually has diarrhoea, and in the late stages will be lame in one leg. The bird may die in the course of a few days, or it may linger on for three or four weeks, in which case it becomes nothing but skin and bones. On opening the bird, the liver and spleen will be found to be covered with raised whitish lumps, varying in size from a small point to half an inch in diameter. In very extreme cases tubercles may be found all along the alimentary canal, and also on the bones in various parts of the body. Unlike human or bovine tuberculosis, the lungs are very seldom affected.

There is no cure for the disease. It is simply a question of keeping it in check as much as possible by observing absolute cleanliness in all the details of poultry management. Kill off all the sick or affected birds, and bury them deeply, and cover them with lime, or, better still, burn them. Clean out the henhouse and whitewash it with a whitewash made with the addition of five per cent. carbolic acid.

Clean out and disinfect all the nests, drinking pans and so on. Put in a layer of fresh earth, sand or gravel, and use an abundance of air-slaked lime under the roosts at all times. The land surrounding the poultry house should receive an application of air-slaked lime, be cultivated, and a crop grown on it. Provide plenty of light in the henhouse, and feed only good, wholesome food. The disease is seldom met with in the winter time, and is usually most active in the late summer months. While the disease cannot be cured, still, by following these directions, it may at least be kept in check to a certain extent.
