Mal Chase has developed into a crack outsider, according to his teammates.

The pinch hitters' craze, with which baseball managers appear to have become afflicted, has a strong opponent in S. B. Johnson, president of the American League, according to a statement made public by him. He declared that he favored baseball legislation to curb the pinch-hitter habit. Mr. Johnson thinks that managers by constantly shifting their pitchers are not only injuring the pitchers, but are reducing the interest felt by steady patrons of the game in the players.

"They are making a joke of the pitchers by taking them out of the game if a couple of hits are made, or by removing a pitcher who is doing well to permit some bench-warmer to go to bat and strike out a man or fly out for him," said Mr. Johnson.

ENGINE OF MODERN TYPE HAS BIG POSSIBILITIES

A rotary steam engine which may work great changes in the design of steam prime movers because of its simplicity, compactness and power, is now being brought out in Canada.

In principle it bears some resemblance to the steam turbine. The steam enters the center of the engine through a stationary sleeve about which revolves a central rotating member or shaft, to which two pistons are attached. The steam on passing through a port in one of these pistons enters a second steam chamber that surrounds the shaft; its expansion causes the shaft to revolve. As it turns around, the pistons successively come in contact with three conical cylinder heads which revolve on their axes and by reason of a pocket in the side of each allow the pistons to pass. This revolving of the shaft and pistons likewise serves to open ports which permit the cylinders to exhaust.

The engine can be reversed at any speed without jar or shock, since the inertia of the shaft and pistons is cushioned against the pressure at the boiler.

PARIS.—The French Government's borrowing operation in foreign securities is taking on important proportions in the American as in the other foreign list. One institution alone has already secured 120,000,000 francs ($2,400,000) in Americans, and it is possible that the final total will run to a handsome figure. Bankers have felt that the French holder of Americans could not now be induced to sell in large proportions, for the most vehement efforts to drive him into the market have not resulted in a liquidation of more than a fifth, and perhaps less, of the total held in the country.

The reasons for this reticence are too obvious to require explanation—fear of a long European crisis immediately after the war, the relatively high degree of certainty in American as compared with European prosperity for the next ten years, exchange advantages, the widespread habit of scattering family fortunes in various fields in anticipation of wars and the ways of bad times, etc. The loaning of securities is another matter, however. No one can accuse the French investor of lack of patriotism; he was patriotic enough to sell some of his Americans even when he thought it was pure folly to do so; now that he has the chance of loaning them in terms he is ready to come forward.

The government's terms are excellent. The theory is that the lender shall receive his interest or dividends at plus 25 per cent, melons included, plus whatever advantage there may be in the exchange. The loan is for three years, with a right to renewals by the state, probably two, in case of force majeure. Because it is not practicable for the state to borrow against its securities unless they are readily marketed it is specified that the state shall have the right to take over itself the loaned paper at prices which are arbitrarily fixed by the minister of finance or, if the lender prefers, at the highest market price achieved during the three months preceding the date of purchase by the state from him, which in some cases might be a better bargain.

The negotiations between the ministry of finance and the bankers representing or advising for the American interest are not quite completed, however, and it is possible that there may be some changes in the list and in the terms before the lending process is started. The Credit Lyonnais, for example, is not yet taking on the American offerings on account of possible changes in the terms. It is naturally impossible to guess accurately as to whether the loan will run to so large a figure as a billion francs. First, because we do not know precisely how much paper there is to draw from, and secondly, because we cannot anticipate the public's real sentiment as regards how far it will pay to go in the matter. Much less can it be estimated how great the effect on exchange will be, for the factors to be taken into account are too many and too vast for present measurement.

Lenders receive a certificate on presenting their securities, and this certificate in negotiable on the Paris Bourse. For American securities not quoted on the Paris Bourse certificate holders at any time demand by handing in their certificates, that the corresponding shares shall be sold for their account on the New York Stock Exchange.

CURVED TONGS USED IN HANDLING SNAKES

Pincers, which resemble curling tongs, are used by a Massachusetts naturalist in handling the most deadly snakes. One member of the pair of pincers, or tongs, is forked at its outer end; the other has a single prong. The handles resemble shear handles. The prong ends are covered with rubber and curved in such a manner that a snake can be grasped and held firmly without doing it injury. The naturalist, on discovering a snake to the earth with a forked stick and then grasps it immediately back of the head with these pincers. In this way the most dangerous reptile can be handled with safety.

OLD BUILDING OCCUPIED
AS NEW ONE CLOSES IT

While a new and larger building is being erected on the site of its old one, a Detroit banking house is escaping the inconvenience of taking temporary quarters by remaining in the original structure and moving gradually into the rear of the other as its offices are made ready. The new building, which is being constructed with steel, completely surrounds the one it is to replace, and when finished will have triple the capacity of the latter. The smaller structure is being razed at the back and cleared away part by part as the work progresses. The exterior of the new bank will be faced with stone and the inside finished in marble.
