MUNICIPAL TRADING
The London, England, municipal elections, to take place the first week in March, are exciting great interest. A cable of last Monday's date says:—
"The independent labor party issued their manifesto in the pending London County Council campaign last week. They propose in effect to convert the capital of the British Empire into a fully developed commune, London to be governed by one central authority, which will be empowered to undertake any enterprise which the people may desire. This frank avowal of communism serves still further to arouse the London public, and the campaign promises to be the hottest in the history of the metropolis. The revolt against municipal extravagance in the management of industrial enterprises, which was first manifested in the November borough elections, is spreading rapidly, and it promises to culminate in the overthrow of the present system at the election on March 2nd."

A clipping from a London paper just to hand gives a report of an address by Mr. Robert Donald, in favor of one central authority, as follows:—
"Having pointed out that the comparisons constantly made between national and municipal debt were utterly misleading, Mr. Donald went on to say that at present the people of London had no control over the local and poor rates were eight different central rates levied in London. They wanted one rate for all London. —one rate which should fall first on the site value, and then on the house value. Equalization up to now had put a new burden on the west-end. When an estate agent discovered that it could get relief to its rates of 6d. in the £2 from equalization, instead of benefiting by the reduction, it proceeded to raise the rates to the old level. Therefore the county council should control the financial policy of the extravagant local bodies, which now spent so freely the money which comes from other districts."

Mr. Donald very vigorously upheld the principle of municipal trading, as will be seen from the following report:—
"Mr. Donald said the outcry against municipal trading on behalf of the middle classes was founded on an entire misapprehension. Bolton had been cited as an example of a town which had run riot for many years with municipal trade, and had piled up millions of debt. The citizens of Bolton rode on municipal tramways to deal at municipal markets. He worked in mills lighted by municipal electricity, drank municipal water, and let them hope, stuck to it. He bought meat which had come from the municipal slaughter houses and cooked it on a hired municipal gas stove with municipal gas. After refreshing his mind at the municipal libraries or museums he refreshed his body at the municipal baths. He listened to a municipal organ recital in the town hall, and finally would be laid at rest for ever in a municipal cemetery. Yet the people of Bolton, instead of groaning under the crushing burden of municipal debt which these services involved, had the satisfaction every year of knowing that the surplus profits of their co-operative enterprises relieved the rates to the extent of 46,000l., equal to about 25s. per family per year. Darlington raised over 23 per cent. of the whole town council's expenditure from its surplus profits on trading, and its enterprises would pay companies dividends of from 16 per cent. to 31 per cent."

Thus, in the view of Mr. Donald, municipal ownership is not a failure in London, but merely requires greater centralization of authority. The Bolton instance, if his statements are well founded, certainly upholds his contention that municipal operations need not of necessity prove either unsatisfactory or unsuccessful.

PACIFIC COAST POLITICS
The Vancouver World in a recent issue shows that Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper is taking a lively interest in provincial politics in British Columbia. There is trouble between the Canadian Conservative Club, of which Sir Hibbert is a member, and what is called the provincial conservative machine. The former, instead of attending the conservative primaries, called a meeting to protest against machine methods. The World thus quotes the address of Sir Hibbert at this meeting:—
"I understand" said Sir Hibbert, "that this meeting has been called as a protest against the predominance of the 'machine' in the conservative party. I am certainly in entire sympathy with such a movement. I, for one, and I know there are many others, do not believe in the present system of selecting candidates. Delegates sent up from primaries to a convention cannot select men to suit the masses. 'I have been brought up a conservative but I am not a slave to the conservative party. If a voter does not approve of a candidate selected by the convention he should not be virtually compelled to vote for such a candidate just because he had attended a primary and had been asked to pledge himself to this effect in order to get past the door."
"Conservatives should be free from the slavery of the 'machine'. In order to get at the opinion of the great mass of Vancouver conservatives I think that the present meeting should be adjourned and a mass meeting of conservatives arranged. If the candidates selected by the convention are not men whom we wish to represent us a new ticket can be prepared and a new party organized. There is ample time if the work is commenced promptly.

"Some may think this a dangerous slip at such a time, but it must come some time, and the sooner we get clear of the 'machine' the better." (Applause.)
Other speakers endorsed the views of Sir Hibbert, and there was talk of an independent ticket. Curiously enough, all is not peace in the liberal fold, and we find the Victoria Colonist announcing:—
"The revolt of a large section of the local liberal association has taken definite form. A dissenting party has been organized under the name of 'Independents.' They have taken as their motto, 'Better terms for British Columbia.'"
In this general turmoil "Fighting Joe Martin" is peacefully disposed, as may be judged from an interview. He was asked if he intended to be a candidate, what his views were, and finally if he thought the country prosperous. To all of these questions Mr. Martin blandly responded: "I do not care to talk."

THE FIRST SNOWFALL
The snow had begun in the gloaming, And busily all the night, Had been heaping field and highway, With a silence deep and white.
Every pine and fir and hemlock, Were crusted too dear for its art, And the poorest twig on the elm tree Was rigid inch-deep with frost.
From sheds new roofs of white were seen, Came Chanticleer's snuffed crow: The stiff rails were softened to swans' down, And still fluttered down the snow.
I stood and watched by the window The noiseless work of the sky, And the sudden surges of snowdrifts, Like brown leaves whirling by.
I thought of a mound in Sweet Auburn, Where a little headstone stood— How the flakes were falling it gently, As did robins the babes in the wood.
Up spoke our own little Mabel, Saying, "Father, who makes it snow?" And I told of the good old Father, Who cares for us here below.
Again I looked at the snowfall, And thought of the lesson I saw That arched o'er our first great sorrow, When that mound was heaped so high.
I remembered the gradual patience That fell from that cloud the snow, Flakes by flake healing and hiding, The work of our disappointed woe.
And again to the child I whispered, "The snow that husheth all, Darling, the music of the snow, Above can make it fall!"
Then, with eyes that saw not, I kissed her, And she, hushed, nestled close to me, Till my eyes were given to her sister, Folded close under deepening snow.
—Lowell.

ECOES OF THE CRAPSEY CASE
(New York Evening Post.)
Deposed Mr. Crapsey is wholly within his rights in agitating for such changes in the creed as will meet modern conceptions of the history of the universe, and thus retain a "hold over the modern mind." We doubt whether the Episcopal Church will cast out one who heretics of the type of Dr. Crapsey; one effort of the kind was enough—and more than enough. But if such men are henceforth to be tolerated, it is in the interest of intellectual honesty that the Church say so frankly and unequivocally. The weak-ness of the Church, says Dr. Crapsey, lies in its unwillingness to "face the fact." He adds:
"Until the church organizations are ready to permit the intellectual freedom that now prevails in the outside world, the church organizations must be content to be without intellectual or spiritual influence, to have not the first, but the last place, in the great work of bringing man into the kingdom of truth."
These are sentences that we commend to the consideration of thoughtful Christians of all sects. Wherever clergymen are gathered together arises the cry that the Church is losing its hold on the community. This effect is not without cause. Thousands of serious men are asking why they should spend money, time and energy on the Church; whether most of the
