TROUBLE OVER THE KIRMESS PRICES

Advance Buyers Wrathy Today When They Went to Exchange

A storm of unusually serious proportions broke this morning in this city. It was not recorded by the instruments at the Meteorological Observatory, but that was about the only place in the city where its effects were not felt.

The storm centre was Landry's music store in King street, where the opening sale of seats for the Kirmess took place and it was forecast by a suddine rise in the price of seats.

Since the first announcement of the big show the highest price mentioned

There were some frank ex-pressions of feeling on the subject which pressions of feeling on the subject which were far from complimentary and at times it almost looked as if physical violence might follow the outbursts of indignation. Voices were raised, fists were shaken and threats were made, but without apparent effect.

The objection seemed to be, not to the fact that a high price was being charged, but that the price was higher than had been advertised in advance when the tickets were sold by the young people taking part, and there was a feelpeople taking part, and there was a feel-ing that the patrons were being forced to part with an extra half dollar against

When an explanation was asked for, a prominent member of the local committee made the following statement:

"The price of $1 was fixed when we expected to hold the Kirmess in St. Andrew's rink, and it was placed at that figure as the lowest possible on the basis of the probable number of patrons. When it was found necessary to change the arrangements and hold it in the Keith theatre we knew that we could not accommodate so many people, and that we would not make so much money, but we decided to retain the seme scale of prices. This was on the understanding that the theatre would seat 1,000 people; but yesterday, when we came to count up the seats, we found that there were only 700 that we could seal as received seats. This meant a When an explanation was asked for, a

"The people who paid $1 for advance tickets can get seats at that price, and good seats, and they are not forced to take those for which $1.50 are charged. 60.15 If anyone is dissatisfied we are quite 10.00 ready to return the money and they will ready to return the money and they will lose nothing by it.

"There is no need for anyone to think that the outside promoters are taking an unfair advantage of anyone, as we share in the increased profits as well as they. In addition to this they are lending every effort to enable us to make money on other features of the scheme, such as the programme, the ball, etc., on which they do not make a cent. We hope and expect to make at least twice as much for the playgrounds as the promoters will make out of it.
