A PECULIAR CASE.

He Saw His Son the Moment He CHATHAM Met Death.

a search party found his body, terribly crushed and bruised, at the bottom of a deep crevasses. Count Cibrario, the unfortunate young man's father, who was at Turian and knew nothing of his son's expedition to the Rocciamelone, on the night of the accident aroused the rest of the family, announcing with tears that Livio was dead. He had seen him distinctly, he said, blood flowing from his battered head, and had beard these words spoken in a voice of terrible anguish:—

"Father, I slipped down a precipice and broke my head, and I am dead, quits dead."

The other members of the family tried in vain to persuade the poor count that the ghastly vision was nothing but a nightmare, and the bereaved father tonlined in a state on him the morning, when the official confirmation of the terrible accident reached him.

This case of telepathy, or whatever name may be given to similar phenomena, is considered all the more remarkable, as Count Cibrario is a very quiet, matter-of-fact person, and has never suffered from disorders of the nervous system or dabbled in spiritualism.

Chatham Won One Game From the Londons

While the Umpire took the Other Away From Them—The Scores.

(Special to The Planet.)

London, Sept. 5.—To-day, Chatham and London played two pames of ball and Chatham succeeded in winning the and London played two sames of ball and Chatham succeeded in winning the morning game by one of the precitiest scenes of batting in one innings seen on the home grounds this season. The bearsy downpour of rain all morning, made the grounds muddy and just before the game was called it raised heavily for a few momants. Sawdast was liberally used and wheelbarrows full of mud taken away from around the box and bases. It opened bright and continued clear as the same progressed. A double and single and base on halls fulled the bases, and they remained that way when the side went out, in the first, in the second Crowwas hit for seven of the cleanest singless possible, scoring five runs. After this Crow settled down and only four hits were made in the remaining seven intoings. Jones got his home run in the fifth after two were out.

London could not touch Watkins and up to the lifth hit three heattering singles were made. In the fifth Chatham got reckless and contributed four errors to the two singles made and allowed London three runs. Watkins

MODERN SHOE MAKING

111 3000000

It's so apparently intricate, yet so simple, and the machines so marvellously and ingeniously constructed, that the "Slater Shoe" People have set up in their SLATER SHOE STORE, 89 KING STREET WEST, TORONTO, during the Exhibition, a set of Goodyear Welt Machines, and a Chase Lasting Machine, as an advertisement, and to demonstrate just how the famous Slater Shoes are made.

The Machines are in full working order, and visitors from all parts of Canada are cordially invited.
