you go in for raising hens? Think of the price of eggs. Sixty-five and seventy cents a dozen and unprocurable at that." Thos. W. Lee, managing director of the Poultry Yards of Canada, Limited, Pembroke, Ontario, issues an appeal for standard bred poultry on the farm and in the suburban yard. The appeal is addressed, in the main, to "hard-headed, common-sense agriculturists desiring to make the poultry end of their farm pay;" but it should not be lost upon poultry-raisers who have only a back yard in which, at present, lays the five cent where the improved forms and set upon the farm and that many trends learn of her death with regret.

may appear somewhat strange to poultry men of advanced ideas, but it is nevertheless true that there are many farmers who do not think it worth while to put standard bred poultry on their farms. Many of the older generation will remember when, for instance .the Shanghai was looked upon as the sum of all excellence, in the poultry line, and many also remember how disappointed they were when it was found that the eggs of these big birds ware but little larger than those of the some cases onto asselarge as the eggs laid by some old hen of exceptional merit. Then came the Cochin China, and the Cochin—the last a distinct improvement on the others. The send stamps for return postage.
