BABYLON.

BY JAMES JEFFREY ROTHE.

Her robes are purple and scarlet, And Kings have bent their knee To the gemmed and jeweled harlot Who sitteth on many seas.

They have drunk the abominations Other golden cup of shame; She has drugged and debauched the nations With the mystery of her none.

Her merchants have gather diriches. By the power of Ler wantomness. A differ usaners are as feeches. On the world's suprome distress.

ences. Length of years on earth is not always synonymo, s with amount of life. Many men live more in one day than others do in years, for the more we think, the more we exercise our intellectual powers, the more we live. Whilst Lorenzo was speaking Elean r lived many years. Her peacentify happy days of gulhood, her promise to Mrs. Button her future desolation, all, all were present in her imagination. She knew that even should Denis Barton ever return to his mother—at most unlikely event—she could not be his bride, tor, alas, her heart's affections were given once and forever to Lorenzo. Yet she dared not accept the latter's proffered love. She had promised to remain free for a time. ences.
