

GENTLEMEN like Leonard Grogan and son William make Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey.

They also make good country music.
And while they know their music is much appreciated around Lynchburg, they're equally proud to know that the Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey they help make is much appreciated in Canada. You see, as Mr. Grogan tells it, there are lots of boys who make good country music.
But only a few who have the knack of making Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey.

Education issues

"Even though we are students, we are also citizens," said Mark Cameron, council vice president external at Montreal's McGill University. "We can't be insular and look only at our own concern."

Cameron said the trade agreement will have a greater impact on the lives of students than any promises to change education funding.

"Free trade interrelates with almost every other issue."

Students at McGill are concerned about how the trade pact will affect their chances for a job and Canada's political sovereignty, Cameron said.

Beth Brown, chair of the national lobby group the Canadian Federation of Students, argued that most student councils had succeeded at raising awareness about student issues. She denied that the 400,000-member organization had failed to capture the attention of federal politicians and the media.

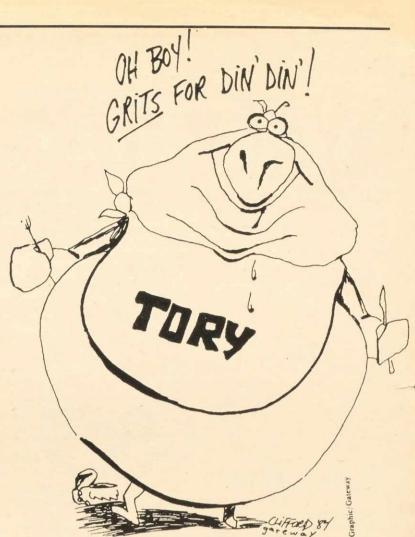

There's nothing like a faculty strike to get students interested in post-secondary education issues. The walk-out at Dalhousie has raised the profile of government underfunding, said coucnil treasurer Frank DeMont. An all-candidates forum attracted over 800 people. Underfunding was brought up, DeMont said.

In a recent editorial in its monthly newsletter, the Canadian Association of University teachers stated it was difficult to get students and politicians to talk about anything but free trade.

'What is being left out of the debate is the role of universities and research in a future where Canada relies even more on the intelligent use of its brightest people," the editorial stated.

"The USA is spending more on each student. . . Canada lags behind its major economic competitors in the amount of resources devoted to research. What effects will this have on our future ability to compete? If academics do not make sure these question are raised nobody else will."

of the term after a two week duration of the strike. The Board said after two weeks' time, students would be informed by the administration of steps being taken so students don't lose their term.

Roger Crawford, one of three law students who have filed a law suit against the university for damages suffered during the strike, indicated his concern for stress and hardship being faced by students who are not receiving the education for which they paid.

None of the members of the Board of Governors commented on this statement.

At the end of the open portion of the meeting, Shayna Watson (a student member of the Board of Governors) presented a bill for $880,000 to the administration for service not delivered during the strike to date.

if they used a condom and they say 'No. I don't like them.'"

The counsellor said heterosexuals have a problem using condoms because the Pill has been an easy and efficient birth control method for years.

"They see the condom as a drastically archaic method, they say it reduces sensitivity and causes a loss of erection." But she said these notions are entirely psychological.

She said the heterosexual community denies the necessity of condoms, while the gay community and prostitutes are now readily accepting them.

"The heterosexual community still believes only a gay person can get AIDS. This is misinformation that taps into homophobia. People like to blame somebody.
