Anent Illustrations

With this issue of Farm and Dairy we present to our readers an Illustrated Section. This supplement is published at great expense; greater expense than any of our readers would believe to be possible.

The breeders who thus place specimens of their stock before you bear a part of this expense. They appreciate the great value of advertising. They great value of advertising. They know the value of placing specimens of what they have for sale before you in this attractive manner. They know that if you are interested in the class of stock they keep you will preserve these pictures, and keep them for reference purposes, and that you will write to them for stock you will a to be.
