He intimates Dublin Freeman's Journal writes:—

that they will spend it all—probably in preparation for the next election. He said:

It is not exactly constitutional for me to tell you what is to be done with it, but I will tell you what will not be done with it. We are not going to allow Mr. Blake and Mr. Maekenzie to treat us as they treated Sanfield Macdonald, and bribe the members with their own money. You remember how Sanfield—a Scotchman like myself, and a Scotch economist, which I sam not—was saving up his surplus, for the purpose, I have no doubt, of using it dispenses.

Dublin Freeman's Journal writes:

"Here they were born, here they lived, here they died; and a more primitive people than those that now hold it has never been my pleasure to meet. Irish is their language, very few understanding or speaking English. They never see a newspaper, know nothing of politics, are ignorant of such things as proclamations prohibiting public assemblies, and never heard of the Land Act till I told sleighs, for which they ask to be excused. She stumbled beyond a low stone fence and When Mr. Blake went to the Maritime Provinces he found that that cry would not go there, because the Maritime Provinces look apon the Senate as their protection against the majority in the popular chamber from the older provinces. So he says he will re-constitute the Senate. Well, I can only say that it is a bad workman that complains of his tools. We have a system based as nearly as we can have it upon the English system. We cannot have a hereditary chamber here; but we have the next thing to it. Every man who goes into the Senate is one of the people; he has the same interests as have the members of the House of Commons; but he has this advantage:—The members of the Senate occupy a semi-judicial position. They are not affected by the election of 1874 are by fell near a haycock. One of the police savantage:—The members of the Senate occupy a semi-judicial position. They are not affected by the election of 1874 or by the election of 1874 or by the election of 1878. They can calmly consider the great questions that ceme before the Legislature, and if in any measures there is evidence of haste, want of good faith, or want of consideration, they can calmly, and they do, calmly, and as seldom as they possibly and properly can, send them back to the House of Commons for re-zonsideration. And as soon as they understand what the deliberate will of the people is, as expressed by the people's House, they—as the House of Lords has always done—yield gracefully to the sober second thought of the people as expressed by their representatives in the Commons.

There is no feeling in the Maritime Provinces that in the Senate

we could never agree to send a number of men over to England to sit in Parliament there and vote away our rights and privileges. I am, as far as this question goes, up to the handle a Home Ruler. We will govern our own country. We will put on the taxes ourselves. If we choose to misgovern ourselves, we will do so—and we do not desire England, Ireland, or Scotland to tell us we are fools. We will say, if we are fools we will keep our folly to ourselves. You will not be the worse for it, and we will not be the worse for any folly of yours. BOOKS OF Instruction and Devotion.etc.
