LAST HOURS OF LANCE CORPORAL EARL DUNPHY

Nursing Sisters Write Letters of Sympathy to Mother of Moran Boy.

The following letters have been received by Mrs. Dunphy, of Moran, relative to the death of her son, Lance Corp. Earl H. Dunphy, who went overseas with the "Fighting 49th" and died of wounds in the Fourth London Hospital on September 14th:

4th London Hospital, London, S.E., Sept. 16, 1918.
Dear Mrs. Dunphy:
I feel I must just write one word of sympathy to you in your great sorrow. I am night sister and had quite a lot to do with your boy. He was just as good as gold, cheerful, patient, and most anxious to get well, poor boy. He suffered very little pain. He was shot through the spine and was unable to feel his wound. He was truly a true and noble soldier. We just loved him. He was a perfect dear to nurse. Always a smile and "Oh, you fine, sister." He passed peacefully away on Sept. 14, about 8.35 a. m., after a quiet night. The Canadian Society were most kind in bringing him all he needed, and I know how kind for mothers to be so far away from their children, but believe me, he had the utmost care, and it was our one regret that his life could not be saved.

With my deepest sympathy,
A. KING, (Sister).

THE CHASE, FARNHAM ROYAL, BERKS, ENG., SEPT. 14, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Dunphy:
By now you will have had the sad news of the death of your son. He died yesterday morning, after lingering about a fortnight after he was wounded. Your heart must be broken at his loss, for you loved him, and after coming into hospital in London, where I was his Canadian Red Cross visitor, his only anxiety was to get a word to you. His case from the first was hopeless, for the spinal cord was severed, though the doctors and nurses, who loved him for his noble and unselfish goodness, did all they possibly could to help him. However, God had will—He otherwise. One sometimes wonders why a Merciful Providence does not take such a boy straight to Himself, but I think it must be because in dying he showed us, who were glad to do what we could for him, how great and unselfish a man he was in pain and trouble. He was paralyzed by his wound from the waist downwards, but towards the end, at least, he did not seem to be in pain, as he said to me when I asked him, very tired, and so God took him to rest.

Dear Mrs. Dunphy, I have more than one case like your boy's just now, slipping quietly away to God, and it breaks my heart to write and tell you mothers that in this world you will not see your sons again. I would like you to know, however, that they could not be in kinder care than that of the Sisters and Nurses, and that they want for nothing that their Red Cross can send them. I went often with fruit and jelly to your boy, anything I thought might help him, and he was always grateful. When we knew the end was coming, I told the Sister to call me if he seemed worse. I wanted him to have some friend by him at the last, besides the women who were so kind and nursed him. I know that you would wish to know all that I could tell you.

On the Friday afternoon before he died I found another boy of his battalion, and actually of his platoon, in the hospital, and I took him with me to see your boy. He was Pte. Percy Young, and your son was so kind to see him. He quite roused himself for a little, and the two had a talk, but he was too weak to stand much, so we left him with the nurse, and I went on round the ward to see my other Canadian wounded. About 6.30 they sent for me. His pulse was weak and the end seemed near, so I went to him. His hands were cold when I took and held them, and I talked to him and asked him would I write to you and his brothers and give you his love. "Yes," he said, though his voice was weak, "but don't tell her I'm so bad. It pretty near killed her when I enlisted. Say I'm getting on fine." He rallied a little and the pulse grew stronger. "You're tired," I said, and he smiled in that gentle way of his and said "Yes." The boys in the ward kept quiet, and I held his hand and he gradually grew more composed and fell asleep, dozing but peaceful and quiet. Before that he had been so wide awake, and after a while I disengaged myself quietly and went home, for there was nothing more that I could do for him, and we none of us wished to worry him talking.

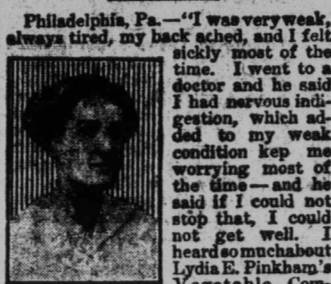

He lingered all night and passed peacefully away about 8.35 next morning.

Your loss is great, dear Mrs. Dunphy, but your pride should also be great that you had a son who to the last was unselfish and brave. It is a very noble thought, and I hope will comfort you. I know how you will feel with all the other Canadian boys who have given their lives for King and Country. In the confusion there they all slept together, and the day of the funeral he will lie in the hospital covered with the flag for which he died. Please accept my sincere sympathy. It was a privilege to do anything for your boy, and the Canadian Red Cross works continually for such men as he was. I am,
Yours sincerely,
KONA V. CARB.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard somewhere about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

VICTORY LOAN AND PEACE CELEBRATION AT LOGGIEVILLE

Loggievill, N. B., Nov. 11.—The "doubling up spirit" is characteristic of the Victory Loan Campaign here. This town, which has for some time been flying its Honor Flag has won the fourth crown. The canvassers have good hopes of further contributions. There has already been subscribed here $200.100.

Thursday was a day long to be remembered here. About 2.30 p.m. the mill and boat whistles and church bells were sounded, notifying the citizens that the world struggle was nearing the end. Residences and other buildings were decorated with flags. Employees in stores, mills and other business centres were given a holiday on Friday enabling them to attend the celebration in Chatham. In the midst of all the joy making, many sympathetic hearts went out to the thousands who have felt the toll of war so keenly.

SAYS FOOD HAS ALMOST LITERALLY WON THE WAR

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—"Food has almost literally won the war. It is growing plainer and plainer that it is the final factor, which brought about the submission in turn of Bulgaria, Turkey, Austria-Hungary and Germany," says the chairman of the Canada Food Board. "Four statements from the best sources in today's news bring the facts out into sudden brightness. The German Foreign Secretary, who should start at once and inform the Secretary of State of the United States that there is a pressing danger of famine among the people."
"An Associated Press message from New York says: 'Starvation is being begged not only for peace, but for bread.'"
"Mr. Andrew Bonar Law, Chairman of the Exchequer, asking the House for a vote of credit of £2,000,000,000."
"It might be necessary for the Allies to make an effort to bring foodstuffs to Europe, in which case the expenditure would be great and it would be vital that the close international unity which the war has produced shall prevail while the ravages of war are being repaired."
When some men get their heads in this glorious land of the free, they are in the ex-convict class.

As a matter of business, what do you think of the plan?

You are a farmer. Canada is a farming country. Canada grows more food than the people of Canada need. To prosper she must sell that surplus food. Great Britain is our best customer for grain, pork, beef, cheese and other farm products. Every practical man must see how important it is to hold the British trade. Canada wants not only the profit on this trade, she wishes to create a good-will in Britain towards Canadian products and thus assure our export business for the future. At the moment Great Britain asks for credit, asks Canada to sell her the products of the farm, "on time." To hold her trade, it is necessary to give this credit. This takes capital—immense capital. For Britain's purchases from Canada are huge, and these purchases must be paid for in cash. In these times, it is not easy even for a nation as wealthy as Canada to procure money. Certainly, no other country can lend us money. The only way now open for Canada to secure money is to borrow from the people of Canada.

This is the reason for selling Victory Bonds. Can anyone deny the sound business sense of this plan of protecting our valuable market? From the standpoint of the man who lends, what better security could he get for his money? Where else could he get a five and a half per cent. return on such security? Where would he find an investment to pay interest so regularly and with so little trouble to the lender? Certainly Canadians have an opportunity to benefit very directly from this borrowing plan. And the money Canada borrows is spent entirely in Canada—a very large part of it for the very crops the farmer has to sell. Therefore, if the Victory Loan is a success, business in Canada must be good, the nation must prosper and so be able to carry on a vigorous war effort in France and Flanders. As a practical man you must approve of the Victory Loan plan. Then help it along. Put your own money into Victory Bonds; urge your friends to buy; work hard among your loyal neighbors to make the Victory Loan 1918 an overwhelming success.
