Address John Washington, auburn P.O., Ont. 2010-13t All who saw and heard Lord Landowne in Woodstock were favorably impressed with him. He is a quiet, pleasant, good looking gentleman, rather small in stature, but well shapen both as to head and body. His voice is full and deep and he speaks with spparent case and fluently. The impression conveyed by his utterances is that the speaker is a thoughtful, well-equipped man of solid ability. His manner in personal intercourse is better than that of either Lord Dufferin or Lord Lorne. It is more 15 Part Con. "C" and proceed at once to soothe him. The first and highest duty of a woman, married or unmarried, is to preserve her health and to perform her duties to all about her. If married, it may be her duty to soothe her husband if he is sick or worried; but it is more like her hishest duty to teach her husband cheerful patience, self-help and deep respect for her maternal functions. A wife who allows her husband to make her unhappy by fussing over the demands of his appetite, or by staying too much within doors tite, or by staying too much within doors that she may be always there when he arrives, or in any other way to sacrifice her health to his pleasure, may be a very devoted wife; and a silly woman."
