FEDERAL GOVT. WILL TAKE NO FURTHER STEPS TO PREVENT STRIKE.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 23. Official notice that the Federal Government would not intervene in the Anthracite wage negotiations, to prevent stoppage of mines, was to-day reached at Atlantic City by the United States Coal Commission. Both sides were told would go no further in an effort to enforce peace, since resumption of negotiations, which was taking intervention last week, merely to precipitate another war.

THE WRANGLING OVER "WRANGLER."

MOSCOW, Aug. 23. Russian Minister Tchitcherine has sent a note to the British Government protesting against the raising of the British flag on Wrangle Island by explorer Stefansson, as Wrangle was incorporated into Russian territory in the years 1821-24. The note states that Russia built lighthouses on the island and undertook other work, and in 1815 formally notified the United States and other governments that the island and territories along the coast of Alaska constituted integral parts of Russian territory. As during the war period no Government recognized Russia's claim. The note says the Soviet Government regards raising of the British flag a violation of Russia's sovereignty.

THE IRISH ELECTION CAMPAIGN.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. In the election campaign there is an absence of violence, which usually characterizes all Irish elections. This is regarded as eloquent of a change of political conditions, but it is also partly due to the fact that Republicans are now professing to stand for law and order. Polling Day is next Monday and has been proclaimed a public and bank holiday.

ATTEMPTED MURDER ON THE HIGH SEAS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23. Story of wild fight in the stokehold of steamship Munamar, as she lurched northward through Tuesday's squall was recounted when the vessel made port with one man at point of death, another in frons. Knives and monkey wrenches were the weapons, and Alfonso Rido, fireman, who was worsted by Adolpho Mohojo, a water tender, bore ghastly evidence of the fury of the fight. His left arm is almost severed at the shoulder, one of his lungs punctured and his head badly cut. Mohojo escaped with a few bruises. The men were engaged in some trifling argument which resulted in their seizing monkey wrenches. They were separated before either was seriously hurt. They met again however in a passageway, and Mohojo who had armed himself with a knife resumed the fray. Rido fled to the deck pursued by Mohojo, and falling near the rail was literally slashed to pieces. Rido it was said would probably die.

Mushroom Seaside Resorts.

It is surprising how many seaside resorts have come into existence within living memory. Seventy years takes us back to 1853. Where then were Blackpool, St. Anne's, Southport, Llandudno, Colwyn Bay, Barmouth, Weston-super-Mare, Bournemouth, Littlehampton, Bognor, Folkestone, St. Leonards, and Hove; East Coast resorts like Clacton, Felixstowe, Brightlingsea, Gorleston, Cromer, and a dozen more; and such places as Whitby and Scarborough?

Of some of these there was not even the beginning. The populous garden city of St. Anne's, with a rateable value of hundreds of thousands of pounds, was not begun. It was just sandhills. Bournemouth had not a thousand inhabitants, whereas now it is a county borough. Bognor disappeared and leaves no trace except a few cottages occupied by fisher-folk. Hove was not; though Brighton was a place of repute. Weston-super-Mare is an old town, but has developed into a watering-place within the last thirty years. Ilfracombe was a tiny fishing village less than fifty years ago. Colwyn Bay did not exist, and Llandudno was very tiny and almost unknown outside Wales. St. Leonards and such places as Bexhill had no existence, any more than had any part of either Hastings or Folkestone outside the areas of their ancient ports.

Even Scarborough was very small, and Whitby solely concerned with its fishing trade. Cromes has risen out of nothing at all really, although legend says that the old town and the old church are beneath the waves, and

When Starfish Are Startled.

Did you know that a starfish has legs? Probably you have never thought about it, but if you want to find out for yourself, put one in a pool of water and watch what happens. In a few minutes it will begin to move, and you will notice it scrambling over stones and sliding up any rock that may happen to be in the way.

This is the moment to snatch it up and have a look at the hundreds of little legs it keeps curled up inside, ready to poke out of holes in the skin when required.

A starfish also has eyes in the tips of its rays, and one particular kind possesses eyelids which open and shut.

Another curious fact about the starfish is that if one of its rays is cut off another one grows, and if the little creature is cut completely in half, each half will throw out new rays, so that in a few weeks two starfishes appear instead of one.

Some starfish have a habit of breaking into pieces of their own accord when alarmed. Even a shadow will cause them to give a shudder and break into bits.

More starfish have a curious habit of protecting their eggs when first laid. They heap them together in a small pile and then bend their rays downwards so that they stand on their tips and form a kind of cage or table.
