T. D. Sullivan Talks for the First Time on the Present Trouble.

T. D. Sullivan Talks for the First Time on the Present Trouble.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—T. D. Sullivan, the white-haired defender of Ireland, poet, and journalist, has a warm place in the hearts of the Irish people. The peculiarly sympathetic appliance that greeted him at the mass-meeting Saturday night demonstrated the hold he has upon the hearts of the Irish in America. This grand old patriot, whose good nature is as overflowing as is his fiery earnestness when aroused, is saddened at the existing state of affairs, which he thinks menaces the success of many years of effort. Commenting late last night upon the attitude of Parnell he said:

"Mr. Parnell is a man of great determination and of resolute character. His splendid attainments have been of great service to us in the past, and it grieves me very much to think that they will be of as much injury in the future. I cannot understand it. I do not see why he should so menace the unity of our party and the happiness of our race. What can he gain? Only his personal aggrandizement. For his own selfish gain he seems willing to sacrifice all the years of effort and privation and suffering which have been gladly endured by those who have loved Ireland. The result will be a little party divided into factions. Every moment since our party was formed we have been united in our work and in our trials. Why does he not, when he sees that his continuance as a leader imperils success, step like the patriot that we have always believed he was into the martial ranks? But no—no. And now, when so near the goal of our hopes and our prayers, we are crushed by his cruel solishness."

The old patriot's voice, which had called thousands to their feet in enthusiasm for Erin's cause at the meeting, was touching in its mellowness and grave in its carnestness, as he spoke, while the blue eyes and the honest countenance reflected the wail of a patriotic heart.
