To the Editor of The Advertiser: May I venture to ask you to let me a slight explanation in regard to what may be a little misleading to your readers in your item headed 'Warning''? Of course, the unfortunate discovery that some one has been base enough to make use, for personal gain, of the claims urged in the interests of our boys in South Africa, has caused much uneasiness, and steps are being taken to bring to light the names of the offenders; but meanwhile we feel that to give the warning alluded to its fullest and most literal interpretation, would be to close for us many safe and valuable avenues of future help, and would also make our committee appear ungrateful to the large number of friends without whose assistance that wonderful consignment of 1,000 pounds weight could not have been dispatched, within 48 hours, to Halifax. There are so many of the workers for the Red Cross Society who are well-known citizens, that the restriction cannot be meant to apply to them, and I hope that none of them will be afraid, as I certainly shall not be, to take all risks, and to accept every copper which may be offered to them to help
