

NATURAL GAS IN I.C.R. WORKSHOPS

Furnished Heat, Light and Power at Big Plant of Government Railway

Moncton, N. B., Dec. 27.—The workshops of the Intercolonial Railway are now piped with natural gas which is being used extensively for the generating of power. Experiments conducted for some time have demonstrated that the natural gas could be used more economically and to better purposes than the gas from the railway plant and this is to be closed down and held in emergency reserve.

The entire railway plant is now supplied with the natural gas which is being used under six large boilers and in all the forges and gas engines as well as for heating purposes and for the generation of electricity for both power and light.

Natural gas is also being used in the general offices and in the station as fuel with the most satisfactory results.

Successful experiments have also been made in car lighting and pipe lines now supply the Pinch gas producing plant and the cars passing through Moncton are charged with natural gas for illumination.

BULGARIAN CZAR HAS FINE RECORD

Brought His Country out of Chaos Into State of Prosperity and Enlightenment

The most outstanding figure among the rulers of the Balkan countries undoubtedly is Ferdinand, of Bulgaria. It is only a little over a quarter of a century since Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha assumed the duties of government in the principality which 21 years later he was to declare a kingdom. It was in July, 1887, that the Bulgarians elected him to the vacant throne, and on August 14th, at Tirnovo the ancient capital of the Bulgarian Czar, he took the oath to observe the Constitution of his adopted country. Just a week later he made his entry into Sofia, and assumed his new functions as ruler.

The task which lay before the young sovereign was no easy one. It was exactly a year since his predecessor, the gallant Prince Alexander, had been seized in his palace by the troops whom he had led to victory, compelled to sign his abdication, and transported to Russian soil at Rens. Throughout his reign of seven years, Prince Alexander had been confronted with the problem of reconciling the determination of the Bulgarians to assert their independence with the claim of Russia to keep the newly liberated nation in leading-strings. He finally determined to adopt a national policy, and the part which he played in the Eastern Roumelian revolution sealed his fate.

Advised by His Mother, Prince Ferdinand in his early reign derived inestimable advantage from the counsel of his mother, Princess Clementine, a highly gifted lady, whom Gladstone described as one of the cleverest women in Europe. A daughter of King Louis Philippe of France, the Princess, while still a girl, was accustomed to advise her father on matters of State; she possessed a masculine strength of character, and a statesmanlike perspicacity of judgment, and it was largely owing to her initiative that her son embarked on his perilous adventure, which she was resolved to bring to a successful issue. Through her own or her husband's family she was connected with many of the principal sovereigns of Europe, including Queen Victoria, who was much attached to her, as she was acquainted with most of the leading figures in the political world, and she skillfully utilized her relationships and friendships in her own cause.

Proclamation of Independence. In 1908 it was widely felt in Bulgaria that the revolution in Turkey afforded a golden opportunity for the achievement of national unity, which the Prince, who noted the sympathy which the Young Turk movement had aroused in Europe, resolved on maintaining a policy of caution. But slight put upon his representative at Constantinople and the new Turkish Government, and the action of the powers, who insisted that the Bulgarian portion of the Oriental Railway Company's line which had been seized by the Government should be restored to Turkey, produced a state of feeling in Bulgaria which could not be ignored, and on October 5, 1908, the Prince proclaimed at Tirnovo the Independence of Bulgaria, and assumed the title of Czar of the Bulgarians.

Country Progressive. The progress of Bulgaria under Ferdinand has been extraordinary. The condition of the people has greatly improved; education has made wonderful strides, and the commercial and industrial development of the country has been equally rapid. The country has been covered with a network of railways, and new ports have been constructed at a heavy outlay. The dynasty is now firmly established, and its position has been further assured by the King's marriage with Princess Eleonore of Reuss-Koeritz, the present Queen whose beneficent activity in many directions has endeared her to the Bulgarian people.

TURKISH WORDS

"Sublime Porte" is one of those European expressions for Turkish institutions which are never used by the Turks themselves. The Ottoman Government's official title for itself is Hukumet-i-senye, the glorious Government.

Turks do not speak of "the Sultan," but of the "Padishah," a Persian term meaning the father of monarchs. Turkey is a geographical expression used outside the land it denotes but unknown to those who dwell in it. The Turks talk of Rumelia and Anatolia, Albania or the Lebanon. They will tell you that they live at Smyrna, Salonica or Beyrout or elsewhere, but the word Turkey never crosses their lips. In the realm itself there is no collective name for the territory of the Sultan.

Albania, Bulgaria and Roumania, although contiguous to one another, speak three totally different languages. The Bulgarian tongue is that of ancient Russia, and Roumanian resembles that of ancient Rome more closely than modern Italian does. Albania has no marked affinity with any other language, though philologists have discovered in it some slight traces of Pasque and Hungarian influence.

Where Nelson Fought

There is now a fine field of cotton where over a hundred years ago some of Nelson's ships floated at the battle of the Nile. Delegates of the International Cotton Federation in Egypt visited near Aboukir Bay, an estate of 30,000 acres which has been reclaimed from the Mediterranean. Forty years ago the land was covered by a lake, but has now been drained.

CANADIAN WEST RICH IN FOSSILS

One Animal of Bygone Ages Had Two Thousand Teeth, Another a Seven Foot Skull

The richest country in the world is the manner in which Charles H. Sternberg, an explorer engaged by the Canadian government, described western Canada when he arrived in Ottawa with over 20,000 pounds of fossils for the Victoria Memorial museum, which included perfect skeletons of two of the most wonderful and extraordinary animals ever unearthed. One of the skeletons named by Sternberg a duck gill dinosaur (three horn trace), had a skull seven feet in length with horns over each eye, and one at the end of the nose. In describing another specimen of the dinosaur, found not very far from the first one, Mr. Sternberg said that he had enough material to complete a mounted 40 feet in length. The front part of the mouth of the dinosaur was expanded into a duck bill, and covered with a horn. The teeth, 2,000 in number, were arranged in magazine form, and made a decidedly interesting study.

Mr. Sternberg was enthusiastic in his praise of Alberta and declared that in all his 40 years of exploration he had not lived in a richer country, nor had he ever made a bigger collection of fossils in the same length of time. He spent the greater part of his time in the Red Deer district. In this region he also found remains of lizards of enormous proportions.

EASY VICTIMS OF CLEVER ROGUES

Fortune Telling Fakir Did a Big Business—Clients Were Mostly Women

Something like 1,500 letters containing money and addressed to a certain "Professor," were sent in one batch by the Montreal Post Office to the dead letter department at Ottawa. Most of these letters came from young women in the United States and Canada who desired "inside information," and were willing to pay for it.

The young women wanted to know what their future husbands would look like—whether to marry the tall fair man or the short dark fellow. For the small sum of two dollars the "Professor" guaranteed to wrest the desired information from the stars.

Cash Rolled In. The professor advertised in a number of magazines and newspapers, and for a time the money just poured in. He was first heard of in St. John, N.B., where the post office authorities quickly put him out of business. Then for a short time he did a thriving business at St. Lambert, Quebec. Finally the professor changed his address to Montreal. About that time the post office authorities in that city became suspicious of him, and the professor in turn became wary and neglected to call for his mail.

Women are the easiest victims for such sharks. They send money to learn needle-work or how to make garments at home. Patent medicine enterprises and matrimonial bureaus are also among the most prolifically employed.

Another Scheme. Upon the representations of a Florida land company a Montreal man purchased some land in Florida with a view to acquiring a quick and easy fortune raising celery. Investigation of the purchase proved the "city" to be a bogus place twenty or twenty-five miles from the nearest settlement. A specimen of the soil on his land was submitted to a Dominion Experimental Farm at Ottawa. Following is the report the Montrealer received from Ottawa: "An examination of the sample accompanying your letter shows it to be practically pure sand. It would have no agricultural value and I do not think that any treatment with fertilizer with the view of making it productive, would prove remunerative."

"We close about five or six swindlers a year," said a post office inspector. "But the Canadian laws are becoming so strict that get-rich-quick-brokers are not using the mails to defraud to any great extent now."
