and Gen. Graham and the other officers and soldiers and marines who took part in the Khartoum expedition, for the valor, perseverance and high spirit they displayed in the arduous work of the desert campaigns. He also dwelt on the gallantry of the members of the Australian contingent, who he said were deserving of special thanks, and on that of the Indian troops and the Canadian voyaceurs. The prime minister praised in unmeasured terms the valor and devotion of General Gordon and of Generals Earle and Stewart and other officers and others who lost other officers and others who lost their lives in the Soudan war, and ittingly expressed condolence with their relatives and friends.

Baron Carrington (moderate liberal) warmly seconded the motion, which was adopted. Not a single liberal leader was present in the house of lords during the proceedings. This absence was much remarked, and was considered as a demonstration against the motion. In the house of commons Sir Michael Hicks-Beach made a similar motion, Speaking of the part taken by the Australians and Canadians in the expedition the chancellor said they had conclusively shown that there existed a strong bond of loyalty between England and her colonies, and that the mother country had in the colonies an element of strength that would serve England well in case of emergency. The Marquis of Hartington seconded Sir Michael's motion, and exonerated Lord Wolseley from blame for many of the shortcomings of the Soudan campaign, because the diroumstances attending or causing them were beyond his control. The marquis praised the Australians and Canadians for their services and the manner in which they were rendered, and the manner in which they were rendered, and the manner in which they were rendered, and was and the manner in which they were rendered, and the manner in which they were rendered, and the manner in which they were rendered, and the manner in which they displayed the health of the activation of the employed the health of the large were sung and Charlard b

Mr. Venables made a brief and feeling reply, and thanked his well-wishers most heartily for the interest they manifested in him. E. F. Clarke then proposed a toast in the interest of manufacturers. Mr. Martin replied first. He said that he could assure the people of Toronto that in their new engine they had one of the finest jobs in the world. He paid a warm tribute to the competency of Toronto's mechanics in building the magnificent piece of machinery which now adorned the pumping house. Mr. Inglis spoke of the spirited fight over the contract. His firm had won and he was sure the city would get good value for their investment, The citizens had acted in a spirit of patriotism and gave the work to a home firm. One of the reasons of Toronto's greatness could be traced to the fact that its citizena stuck to one another and were loyal to the interests of Harbormaster Baldwin notified the department that water works officials were dumping refuse into the bay west of the engine house contrary to city bylaw, under which he would proceed against them unless the practice was stopped.

The superintendent recommended certain changes in the receiving department, with a view of having a complete check of the receipts and knowing each day how the cash stands. A bylaw will be prepared to give effect to the changes. Inspector Gibson has recovered from his illness and reported for duty. W. B. Malcolm wished to know if the committee would accept the claim of $212 against him in instalments. The superintendent thought this might be done in four payments, Recommended to the council.

A fire hydrant was ordered to be placed on the north side of King street between Berkeley and Ontario. The street between Berkeley and Ontario. The superintendent was asked to report more fully as to the laying of mains on Givens street and Ossington avenue. Mr. Hamilton appointed J. B. Cloudsley as inspector of the steel boilers being built by John Perkins for the engine house. The inspector reported that a large number of the holes have been punched instead of being drilled, but that the work so far looks very fair. He has stepped all punching, and will carry out the specifications from this date. Ald. Hunter protested against the specifications being violated in this way and asked for a full report, which was ordered.

Central Prison Commission.

The direct charges of ten more Central prisoners were looked into yesterday by the commissioners. The witnesses all told the same story of bad food and ill usage as has already been related so many times.

prison for obtaining goods under false pretences. He was subject to fits, and was sent to the hospital, where Guard Hunt sat on him in bed and burned him with hot irons. When scarcely able to work he was taken from the hospital and set at work in the brick yard. His breakfast was unfit to eat and he complained to the warden. On making inquiries the warden was told that the prisoner was deceiving and sent him to the dark cell for 72 hours. After passing 40 hours he took a fit and fell, hurting his head badly. When he came out he was put at work again, although still very weak, and soon took another fit. While he was in this fit Guard Hunt tore the nail from his left thumb to see if he were sharaming.

This finishes the investigation of chalges made directly to the commission. The other charges will be recontinued to day.
