

in Ontario in 1896 the prompt action which was taken to control it was largely due to him. In 1893, he assisted the Provincial Government in organizing the Ontario Fruit Experiment Stations.

He was one of the most enthusiastic and energetic workers in the Ottawa Horticultural Society, while in Ottawa, and was one of the few who organized the Society in 1893. He was president of that Society for 1895, 1896 and 1897, during which time it developed rapidly.

Mr. Craig resigned his position as Horticulturist of the Central Experimental Farm in 1897 and went to the United States, where he took a special course at the Agricultural College at Cornell University, obtaining the degree of Master of the Science of Agriculture there in 1899. He was appointed Professor of Horticulture and Forestry of the Iowa State Agricultural College in 1899, which he held until 1900 when he accepted the position of Professor of Extension Teaching at Cornell. He filled this office until 1903, when he became Professor of Horticulture of the Cornell Agricultural College, which post he held until his death.

Prof. Craig filled many offices in the United States and served on many important committees. He became Secretary of the American Pomological Society in 1903 and was still Secretary when he died. Notwithstanding his many other duties he edited The National Nurseryman, a trade paper of importance, and the organ of the American Association of Nurserymen. Prof. Craig's outstanding qualities were his strength of will, by which he overcame many obstacles, and his capacity for work, which, with his determination to succeed, led him from one important position to another.

His courtesy to those who worked with or under him was very noticeable and much appreciated. He had a keen sense of humour which in time, of difficulty, and even of sickness, did not leave him. He loved horticulture in all its branches and being intimately connected with it from his early youth he had a broad insight into, and a great knowledge of, the whole field.

He was loyal to his friends who, though scattered far throughout Canada and the United States, felt during his life that he was always true to them.
