

- approach to building peace. For example, child-soldiers, whether they appear to be deserving our help and our compassion or not, may prove to be the most important strategic goal in terms preventing future conflicts and building future leadership.
- It is the role of any and all of the members of the G7 to express their concrete and material support for regimes that are attempting to function in a democratic manner.
- Young people, in Canada and elsewhere, have a role to play in keeping their governments and their leaders clear on their contradictions.
