

CHAPTER XXIV

LEAVE'S END

AS the leave train steamed out of Victoria on the following Friday, an artillery lieutenant leaned bare-headed out of the window, waving to a blue-eyed girl with fair hair who ran along the platform, crying, "Good-bye, Kitten darling! Good luck!"