

EATON'S DAILY STORE NEWS

The Formal Display of Our Dress Fabrics and Silks for Fall Takes Place Monday

Beauty, Newness and Elegance of Weave and Coloring combine to make in the Dress Fabric Sections one of the most interesting displays we ever presented.

Demonstrating the far-reaching possibilities of the Store in procuring the worthiest in weave and coloring, and emphasizing the position of this section as exponents of what's most correct and desirable in the world of dress fabrics. Those circles devoted to fancy diagonals, broadcloths and worsteds offer a wealth of choice that makes this display an authoritative exposition of the best of the new season's productions.

Perhaps the most interesting of the new fabrics is called ratine—a heavy looking, thick material, but quite light-weight, for tailored suits and separate coats. This you'll see shown in conjunction with a wonderful display of fur effects, such as baby lamb, Persian lamb, Russian pony, etc.

Fancy Diagonals, surpassing in loveliness any collection we ever presented before. These magnificent goods, with their beauty of finish, and the attractiveness, the heavy serge-like weave, that has already created a demand, promise to become favorites. England, Germany and France have contributed their choicest weaves, and the rich color array is a feature of this circle. Prices from $1.00 to $1.50.

Worsteds, most popular of all for dressy suits. These weaves show an elegance in finish this year that adds to the beauty of the new colorings.

The New Colors—Dull, sombre shades, as beautiful as they are unusual, are featured for the new season. The darker tints of Autumn, intensified by contrasting shades, will be worn for street costumes as well as evening dresses, and even coat linings will be of contrasting shades. Harmony of coloring is the keynote of the new fashions, and in a display of such lavishness as we show selection becomes a delight.

The Evening Wear Section of the Dress Goods Department is one round of surprise—there are brocaded moires, a fabric of extreme daintiness, combining a rich moire effect, with beautiful BROCADED CREPE—an absolutely new weave—an exquisite effect of satin roses on soft, clinging crepe. In exclusive costume lengths; this material is very suitable for those wishing a distinctive evening gown of the utmost elegance. Per yard $2.50

Here also are lovely effects in crepe de chene, in Persian patterns, in the transparent effects so fashionable.

Bollesnes—more beautiful than ever—soft, clinging, lustrous fabrics, silk and wool mixtures, in Persian designs that will be worn for dresses, waists or trimming effects. Per yard $2.00

Moire Stripe Bollesnes—another lovely material to be worn over satin—is shown in shot effect. Per yard $2.00

A feature of this showing are the exclusive costume lengths in crepe in such effective combinations as rose and blue, green and navy, green and brown, etc. Per costume length $18.00

Silks, Satins, Velvets and Velveteens

The beauty of the new silks will but emphasize the extensive use of silks and kindred fabrics for Fall and Winter of 1910 and 1911. Plain silks having a bright or satin finish are most popular, though vying for favor come the foulards, Dresdens, Paisley and neat fancy dress silks in both evening and street shades.

The use of satins will be quite remarkable for the coming season, according to all indications—for evening gowns and afternoon dresses, street wraps, foundations for transparent fabrics—even tailored suits of satin are spoken of.

The new double fold foulard is a feature, as is also the new Chantecler surah silk for dresses and waists, and the lovely double width chiffon velvet, has a most closely sheared pile, making it a most beautiful fabric for dress purposes.
