THE COUNTERSTROKE

By AMBROSE PRATT

Author of "Vigorous Daunt, Billionaire."

They stood, their backs turned to him, but soon he recognized the Prince from certain extravagant gesticulations peculiar to the man. After what seemed to Cressingham an interminable period, but in reality was only a few moments, he had so far recovered his composure as to hear vague murmurs, and a little later words and whole sentences. The Prince spoke quickly and eagerly; his demeanour was authoritative and unstrained; he appeared to be angrily urging some course upon the woman which was repugnant to her inclinations; she answered him for long in monosyllables, and her attitude was distinctly combative.

"You are mad even to dream of returning," cried the Prince in fluent Russian. "Are you blind to the dangers that threaten? You will be lonely. What then? Dull, perhaps, but safe! Soon I shall go to you--as soon as possible. That prospect does not please you. Speak!"

"What do you call soon?" asked the woman in a stifled voice.

"One week, perhaps; two at furthest. I would accompany you now did I dare; but in that case I should be ruined. Already I believe that Perigord suspects it. I will require much art and my constant presence here for the next few days to baffie his suspicions."

With a violent effort he restrained himself from immediately rushing forth and doing he knew not what. Madame's words came to him in a sort of dream: "When you make me your wife before the world, I shall be kinder--not before. Too long have I been a soft, submissive fool."

"Kate, Kate, you know well how impossible it is. My nephew--"

"Your nephew will not live for ever. If you had not been such a fool--"

"Hush!" cried the Prince, glancing round him furtively. "Ha, those shrubs; some one may be lurking there. Why did I not notice them before? Swinging on his heel, he quickly approached the Englishman, peering into the bushes as he came. Cressingham awaited him, uncertain and indeterminate, leaving all to fate. The Prince skirted the clump very closely, looking at the stumps with his eyes. "Nothing," he cried, trying to imitate the Prince. But the wood was a hollow creak, so weak and flaccid were all his organs from the exertions he had undergone.

Madame, completely alarmed, ran towards the boat, calling loudly for assistance. Cressingham saw that his case was desperate, for he had no weapon, not even a stick, and he had counted at least six figures by the boat.

Giving the Prince's neck a final wrench, he got quickly to his feet, and stooping low, ran as swiftly as he could directly to the sea. He saw in silhouette the men leave the boat and run towards Madame. He reached the water without a mishap and without discovery, for the darkness had befriended him and he had left the Prince quite unconscious.

Then a desperate idea occurred to him. All the attendants of the Prince had gone to investigate their master's accident, leaving Madame midway between the clump of bushes and the boat. Could he not make a dash and seize the boat, he would be able to row across the bay and warn Perigord in time perhaps to avert any serious misfortune to the expedition and to effect Madame's retreat. Gathering his energies together, he slipped noiselessly along the edge of the waves until he crouched almost opposite Madame and

BLOUSE OF LIGHT COLORED CREPE OR SILK.

One or two light, dressy blouses are a always required for wear with odd skirts or with one's tailor gown, and for informal occasions, the theatre or afternoon card parties are much in vogue. The illustration shows a very pretty model, which could be copied in almost any thin silk or crepe material. Lace insertion about three inches in width was used for trimming, these strips of insertion being pointed at the ends, which were finished by a simple scroll design done in narrow gathered silk ribbon. Pale cream yellow messaline was used for the model blouse, the face being cream white Chantilly, the narrow satin ribbon exactly matching the waist material.

Moncton, Nov. 21.--Word has been received here of the death of Samuel A. Seaman, who, up till a couple of years ago, conducted a restaurant in this city. He died in Winnipeg.

The junior and senior mission bands of German street United Baptist church held a highly successful floral evening last night. The lecture room was beautifully decorated and gaily colored bouquets in imitation of flowers were arranged most artistically. The young ladies of the church were also dressed so as to represent flowers, hairies, hairies and bees. A plentiful supply of home-made ice cream and candies was on hand and everyone enjoyed the evening to the utmost. A short programme of musical and literary numbers was given by the children. The proceeds of the entertainment will be applied for the education of a missionary in India.

SKIN DISEASES

Salt Rheum, Pimples, Erysipelas, Ringworm, Shingles, Scald Head, Itching Sores.

All diseases of the skin are more or less directly caused by a bad state of the blood, which produces acid humors and corrupts the secretions.

No one can expect to have a clear, bright skin when the blood is in a disordered condition, and the stomach, liver and bowels acting feebly in consequence.

All the above skin diseases, in fact, any disease arising from a bad condition of the blood, are curable by through its wonderful cleansing, purifying powers on the blood, and its renovating action on the system.

Mr. A. Squire, Dominion, N. B., tells how he was cured of Salt Rheum. He writes: "For years I suffered with Salt Rheum, and was unable to find a curable remedy out of all the medicines I took, and Physicians consulted. Finally I was urged by a friend to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after a very short space of time I was completely cured. I shall always recommend B.B.B. for such cases, as I consider it an indispensable remedy."

Price $1.00 per bottle or 6 bottles for $5.00.

Miss Elsie Crockett, Fredericton, is in the city.

L. E. Wright, of bury, was yesterday.
