Prospective Husband of Canadian Girl May Come Into Baronety — His Father a Picturesque Character Who Once Saved Life of King Edward VII

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company)

Emperor Francis Joseph has just bestowed the rank of furst, that is to say, of prince, with the predicate of serene highness, upon Count Francis Thun, who, after being Prime Minister of Austria, is now once again Governor of Bohemia, a post which he accepted at the earnest instance of Emperor Francis Joseph, and of his heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

The new prince, (whose title of count dates from the end of the sixteenth century—his title of baron from the beginning of the fourteenth century, and whose family traces to the Tyrolean Urndel, namely, to those who were nobles of Tyrol before the establishment of the Holy Roman, that is to say, of the German Empire, and whose own branch of the family has been in possession of his wonderful castle of Tetschen, in Bohemia, for nearly 400 years), is one of the most masterful statesmen of the present day in the dual empire.

Czech of the Czechs, he is the one man, perhaps, who knows how to maintain the order between the warring factions of the Czechs and the Germans in Bohemia, and who, during his previous term as Governor of Bohemia, did not hesitate to proclaim a state of siege, with the object of impressing, not only on the Germans, but also on his fellow Czechs, that obey the law must be obeyed.

The count divides his time between his palaces in Prague and Vienna, and his ancestral castle of Tetschen, which, perched on a crag of rock, constituting one of the Elbe gates of Bohemia, played a great role in the seventeenth and eighteenth century wars. Its gardens are famous all over Europe for their roses, of which there are some 2,000 varieties. The family chapel stands on a still higher hill than the castle, and is visible for miles around. But the burial place of the Thuns is in the Loretto church, on the market place at Tetschen, where for the magnificent deeds of all the members of the grand old house of Thun have been laid to rest.

The new prince is very tall, full-faced, determined looking man, clean shaven, save for short-cropped side whiskers, once sandy, now white; wears a monocle, a laugh of the Golden Pleece, is somewhat of an anti-Semite, is enormously rich, and if he has accepted once more the office of Governor of Bohemia, he is prompted purely by patriotism and by the pressing request of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and of the emperor.

May Come Into Baronety

Captain Vierville Champion de Crespiigny is the third surviving son of Sir Claude Champion de Crespiigny, and is a lieutenant of the Grenadier Guards, and a lieutenant of the royal navy, are both uncles of the new prince.

Captain Vierville, who is a captain of the Wilshire regiment of infantry in the regular army, and who has seen a considerable amount of active service in the Boer war and in the various military operations in East Africa, has the very high honor of succeeding to the baronety of his widely known father.

If I mention this, it is because Captain Vierville de Crespiigny is about to be married to Miss Augusta MacSloy, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James MacSloy, of St. John's, N. B.

Just at present the captain is not very "boughtly" endowed with worldly goods. But should he succeed to the baronety, any to the property connected therewith, he will be very rich man, through the falling in of an immense number of leases in the northern part of London.

The baronety is of relatively modern origin, dating only from the reign of George IV. The family, however, is one of the oldest of Normandy, and has been settled in England since the seventeenth century, when they emigrated to Great Britain in connection with the revolution of the captain's father, Sir Claude, is one of the most picturesque characters in English life, has been in turn a sailor, a few months a lieutenant of Admiral Lord Charles Boscawen, an officer of the English line brigade, a cavalryman in the Prussian army during the Franco-Prussian war, a war correspondent, a champion rider, as well as for many years champion amateur boxer of England.

He holds several medals for saving life from drowning, was bitterly disappointed when Hon. Lord Bessborough refused to carry him on his back across the Falls of Niagara, on a light-rope, and has figured as an amateur fencer in a Spanish bull-fight.

It was while in command of the Suffolk Hussars, one of the crack regiments of yeomanry, or militia cavalry of the army, that Sir Claude was taken to task

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and set it. He will work with energy and think clear, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents all diseases. It makes a man's inside clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and cleans, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Consultation: the most unclean uncleanness. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

THE KEY TO HAPPINESS

The right key to a happy life is patience with little annoyances, whether they train to sell or others. It has been well said that happiness depends much upon "cultivating our growth of small pleasures." The fact that laughs in a mirror see another that laughs back. Cultivate a happy disposition and let others see it. The bright, cheery face will be reflected in many another face. Down with the black flag of ill-temper that nobly gives no quarter, and up with a banner of good cheer, that, being helpful to the world at large is itself helped.

The Evening Chit-Chat
By RUTH CAMERON

"SHOULD say you were a 'letive'," commented Molly, the little stenographer lady, after a remark from the man-who-thinks, "I'm afraid I'm not for it's a new one to me, Molly."

"Why, hasn't the lady ever told you about her letive club?" questioned Molly, in surprise. "Big sister, I'm surprised at you. Go ahead and tell them right now."

"It is queer that I haven't before," said the lady-who-always-knows-somehow. "Well, it's this way:

"When I was first married we moved to R—. R— is one of those little old-fashioned towns where everybody knows everybody else. Across the street from me lived a dear little woman with three adorable children. She was one of the sweetest, most kind-hearted and self-forgetful little women I ever knew; and I took to her at once and apparently she did to me."

"We were great friends for several weeks, and then one day a caller said to me: 'My dear you are so intimate with Mrs. R. I've been wondering if you knew about her. You see, my dear—and then followed the old, old story of a girl who had loved—not wisely, but too well.'

"She didn't remember to tell the sequel of a woman whose brave efforts to live her past had been constantly frustrated by happier women; but I could tell that to myself."

"I knew my friend was now a good and honorable woman, altogether far more worth knowing than most of the women who enjoyed telling their tales of woe; and I meant this shouldn't make the slightest difference in our friendship."

"But, of course, the next time I saw her I couldn't help thinking about it—that's the worst of hearing that things you can't help thinking about them."

"I certainly never meant to show it. I tried as hard as I knew how not to, but evidently some sixth sense of hers was preternaturally sharpened by suffering, for she hadn't been with me five minutes before she said suddenly: 'You know, I couldn't deny that I knew, but, of course, I told her as warmly as I could that it didn't make any difference at all.'

"It can't help but make a difference," she said. 'You are sweet not to want it to, but you can't help thinking about it. And it was so beautiful to have you not know and treat me just like other people. I was afraid everytime I saw you it would be different. They tell everyone you know, and then they look at me that way. It's my punishment and, of course, I deserve it, but sometimes it seems as if I couldn't stand it.'

"Well, my husband's business changed and we had to move from R— about two months later. During that time we had tried to be the same, but there was a feeling of constraint. I always felt afterward that if I had been there right along and had time enough I could have brought things back the way they were at first, and been real close friends, for I never saw a woman I admired more or liked better. But, you see, I didn't have the chance."

"I suppose you see what all this has to do with the 'letives.' It came over me that Mrs. L. was only one of a great many people who've made mistakes or sinned in some way in their early lives, and who are tied for a lifetime to their sins by people's cruelty. So I simply made myself a promise that I'd never under any condition pass along anything like this about any man or woman who was trying to live it down, and that I'd try to make as many others as I could see it my way."

"Molly called it a club. Well, it is a sort of big, silent club, with no meetings or dues or anything like that. Your only obligations are to make this promise, and also to promise to tell anyone else about it whenever you can, and give them a chance to join."

"Molly," said the man-who-thinks, "I said I didn't belong, but I do right from this minute."

"Lady," said the wants-to-be-cynic, who had listened without one flippant interruption—a record for him. "Me, too, please."

N. B.—The Lady-who-always-knows-somehow wants me to extend her invitation to belong to the "letives" to you, if you aren't already a member.

H. R. ROBB IS PRESIDENT.

At the annual convention of the N. B. Pharmaceutical Society at Loch Lomond yesterday, the matter of the sale of poisons in grocery stores was considered, and steps will be taken to prevent it. After dinner at the Ben Lomond House officers were elected as follows—President, H. R. Robb, St. John; vice-president, A. J. Ryan, Fredericton; secretary, B. F. Chebbut, Fredericton; treasurer, G. Y. Dibble, Fredericton; and registrar, E. R. W. Ingraham, St. John.

TO SAVE TROUBLE

When the housewife is preparing some made dishes with cold meat which has been left over, she tries to give a new relish to the dish by adding various kinds of spices and flavorings. How frequently the result is a failure! Just a little too much pepper and the dish is too hot, or a slight error in seasoning, and one particular flavor dominates the others.

The wise housewife has recently made up her mind that she will save trouble by using all-made-up dishes. She is to have a bottle of the Ed. E. Spices at hand for the great purpose of enriching soups and gravies.

In each bottle there is a delicious blending of the choicest essential oils and spices, and pure natural flavors. It is not beyond the mark to say that a bottle of Ed. E. is a cruet in itself.

Just a spoonful added—the salt—and the goodness of the dish is seen. What trouble it saves! No wonder the best housewives always keep a bottle of Ed. E. Spices handy. It is useful in so many ways. Just a few drops in the soup, or with hot or cold meat, fish or even bread and cheese, it is delicious and gives quite a new enjoyment to the meal.

FOR REGISTRATION.

Examinations were begun in the Oddfellows' Hall yesterday morning for doctors wishing to secure registration. The number taking the exams is very small on account of the new five year course which the medicine have to take at McGill. This is the fourth year of the McGill course, hence the small number. None of those writing the papers are from this city. Doctors Emery, Christie, White, Water, Warwick and R. Skinner are conducting the examinations.
