Sir Wm. Mackenzie Performs Important Ceremony at Little White Otter River-Party Banquetted at Port Arthur.

The Girl of the Mountains, a Rocky Mountain drama in five acts, as presented by the degree team of the local lodge of Moose in the York Theatre, proved one of the best amateur productions of the season. The theatre was crowded at both performances and the general applause accorded the actors and actresses showed that their work was fully appreciated. The play itself was particularly good. A generous supply of vaudeville features were presented between the acts.

The story deals with life and love in the Rocky Mountains, and the different parts proved particularly adapted for the different members of the company.

It would be hard to pick out anyone of the company as the best, for the work of all was very pleasing and showed careful preparation and a perfect understanding of the characters.

E. A. Trainor as Malvin Shortwell, had a difficult part, but he seemed to live the character, and his interpretation of the role was particularly finished.

have been a serious acident. As it was, although the two coaches were demolished there was no more serious injury than a severe shaking up.
