Timber Lands.
Mr. Hubbard's attempt to get the tax removed from wild land will, of course, be defeated. It is a special tax levied for a special purpose, and should be maintained. Every year more of the public lands are being transferred to private hands, and the new settlements require a large amount of timber. It would be very pleasant for Mr. Hubbard, or any other man to buy land at a slight profit, and then to be relieved of taxes upon it until it could be disposed of at a profit. It would be better for the Province to give the lands away, and impose an additional tax on them, than to allow them to be purchased and sold, and the taxes to be paid, and the land to be sold, and the taxes to be paid, and the land to be sold, and the taxes to be paid.
