"Oh, yes," chimed in several. "They came in their own carriage, too," said the sister, animatedly. "And then there were the Randalls, and the Van Rensalears. Mrs. Van Rensalear had her cousin from the city with her. And Mrs. Randall wore a very heavy black silk, which I am sure was quite new. Did you see Colonel Haywood and his daughters, love?"

"I thought I saw them, but I wasn't sure. They were here then, were they?"
"Yes, indeed," said they all again, and the lady who lived across the way observed:
"The Colonel was very sociable, and enquired most kindly about you, and the sickness of your husband."

The widow smiled faintly. She was gratified by the interest shown by the The friends now rose to go, each bidding her good-bye, and expressing the hope that sle would be calm. Her sister bowed them out. When she returned,

It sells ten millions of lollars worth a year. Of it Mrs. Isabela B. Hooper thus writes in a private etter published in the Hartford Courrant:

"Your young friend stayed uncommon-ly late last night, and I was quite incliny late last night, and I was quite inclined to come into the parlor and dismiss him," said an indulgent father to his pet of sixteen. "Oh, yes, it was pretty late; but we got so interested in discussing ritualism that we did not notice the fleeting hours, papa." "Discussing ritualism?" sternly queried the father, and then he walked slowly away, with his hands under his coat skirts, trying to remember what they called it when he was young.

An Englishman called on Longfellow An Englishman called on Longtellow which was Washington's headquarters at Cambridge. He showed him through courteously. The visitor expressed much satisfaction, and begged to know his host's name. "Longfellow," said the poet, not unreasonably expecting some recognition. "Ah, indeed! an American." But worse even than that is the story of some Cambridge tourists who asked the car conductor to show them Lowell's house. He said he didn't know the name. "James"
