I Am Photography

I carry the News of the World, and bring you Visions of Far Distant Lands. Our Modern Civilization is largely dependent on my efforts. Though Men may pass and empires crumble to Dust, my magic will preserve their Likeness for Future Generations.

Each day as you read your daily paper, you see therein pictures of persons or things of interest, from England, U.S., China, or some other part of the world.

These must be of interest to us or they would not be published. The pictures of things Foreign are of interest to us, why should not pictures of our own be more so. But you do not see very many pictures of our people or things of our own. Let us overcome this and let every one of the Annapolis Valley see the papers and by sending the photographs to our friends.

"Will preserve their likeness for future generations."

Through photography may we come a veritable history of our valley, let our camera record the changing faces and costumes. So that our next generation may see the faces of the people of our own be more so. But you do not see very many pictures of our people or things of our own. Let us overcome this and let every one of the Annapolis Valley see the papers and by sending the photographs to our friends.

A Happy Childhood is a Matter of Health

Little children quickly get out of sorts but by prompt treatment they can just as quickly be set to rights again. Most of their troubles arise from the first place from the stomach and bowels; that is why a good clear-prescription is the first thing the doctor prescribes. Why not let Baby's Own Tablets keep your child from tasting castor oil so plain and simple as the Tablets are. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Unlike that ill-smelling, rank tasting castor oil so plain and simple as the Tablets are. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MORE COURTESY NEEDED

The old question of hospitality and courtesy should enter into the present-day life more than they do, we think. It is such a pity that this has gone out of fashion.

"Headaches, Bilious Spells, Are Now All Gone"

Mrs. John Ireland, Nobleton, Ont., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from severe headaches and bilious spells. I tried a number of remedies without obtaining any benefit until I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These completely relieved me, and made me feel like a new person. I am very grateful to Dr. Chase's Medicine for what they have done for me, and you may use my letter for the benefit of others."

My goodness! he exclaimed. "How you clobber all dem fags!"

Every day for four years, and now he's got full beard, and he's going to get married this year—before he's eighteen years old.

"Joe Bullitt's got a cousin in Iowa that knows all about this. He knows the girl this fellow with the beard is going to marry, and he says he can get 'em out the best thing could have happened. There's hundreds of cases just a few of 'em. People used to get married in there and never think anything of it at all. Right up to more people married at those ages than there were along about twenty-four and twenty-five, the way they are now. For instance, you take Shakespeare. He had mentioned Shakespear impulsively, in the ardent of demonstrating his point. However, in second thought he decided to withdraw the name.

"I mean, you take the olden times," he went on. "If anybody got married after they were nineteen or twenty years old, unless they were married by that time. And right here in couples married in the last six months under twenty-one years of age."

Mr. Genesis uttered a loud chuckle. "What pussin' me is how you member 'em after you done clobber 'em."

William's expression was pleasant to see—in fact it was the pleasantest expression Jane had seen him wear for several days. Almost always lately he was profoundly preoccupied and seemed to be very nervous, and he was so careful of his feelings, he was certain to break out about every so often, no matter what happened."

SEVENTEEN

A tale of youth and summer time and the Baxter family, especially William.
By BOOTH TAKINGTON.

CHAPTER X.
Speaking of Early Marriages.
"REMEMBER pretty much everything," William said to the aged negro, as it in modest explanation of the performance which had excited the aged man's admiration. "I can remember things that happened when I was four years old." William coughed with a certain importance. "Do you remember," he asked, "when you were married? How did you feel about it? Were you kind of nervous, or anything like that, beforehand?"

Mr. Genesis again passed a waverling hand across his troubled brow. "I mean," said William, observing his perplexity. "were you sort of shaky—fr instance, as if you were taking an important step in life?"

"Lemme see." The old man pondered for a moment. "I felt mighty shaky once, I rickaleet—dat time yalla m'late ma about at me 'um behime a snake fence."

"Shootin' at you?" Jane cried, stirred from her accustomed placidity. "Mr. Genesis! What did he do dat for?"

"Nuttin'," replied Mr. Genesis, with a shrug. "nuttin' in de wide world! He boun' to shoot somebody an' pick on me 'cause I 'uz de hindler!"

He closed his knife, gave the little boat a final scrape with the broken glass and then a soothing rub with the palm of his hand. "Dah, honey," he said, and simultaneously factory whistle began to blow, "dah yo' 'll steamboat good as a kite, git her widout no bliter ner no smokestack. I reckon yo' puppy'll buy 'em fer you."

Jane was grateful. "It's a beautiful boat, Mr. Genesis. I do thank you!"

Genesis, the son, laid aside his tools and approached. "Puppy finish whitin' spang on 'em non whitin'!" he chuckled. "Come long, puppy. I bet you walk 'as' nuff goin' todes distasteful and likin'."

William and Jane watched the brisk departure of the antique with sincere esteem and liking.

"He must have been sixteen," said William musingly.

"When?" Jane asked.

"William, in deep thought, was still looking after Mr. Genesis. He was almost unconscious that he had spoken aloud, and he replied automatically: "When he was married."

With a start, he realized into how great a condescension he had been betrayed and hastily added, with pronounced hauteur: "Things you don't understand. You run in the house."

Later Jane was in the front hall, and she jumped for joy, pointing to the called to her brother. Richly ornamented, his embellishments including straw hat, unusual shoes and a blousy coat! "It's goin' to rain!" she said.

"It's not," said William, irritated. "It's not going to anything like rain. I s'pose you think it ought to rain just to let you sail that chunk of wood."

"It's goin' to rain! It's goin' to rain!" Jane made a little singsong chant of it. "It's goin' to rain—It gives Willie a pain—it's goin' to rain—It gives Willie a pain—it's goin' to rain—"

He interrupted her sternly. "Look here! You're old enough to know better. I s'pose you think there isn't anything as important in the world as your getting the chance to sail that little boat! I s'pose you think business and everything else has got to stop and get out of the way—just to please you!"

As he spoke he walked to an umbrella stand in the hall and deliberately took of his father's hat. Jane's eyes became strange and unbearable. She uttered a shriek.

"Willie's goin' to carry a cane!"

He went down the street trying to swing the cane in an accustomed and unembarrassed manner.

Jane made this difficult.

"Willie's got a cane!" she screamed. "He's got papa's cane!" Then, resuming her little chant, she began to sing: "It's goin' to rain—Willie's got papa's cane—It's goin' to rain—Willie's got papa's cane—"

She put all of her voice into it. "Miss Pratt'll get wet if you don't take an umbrella—er-r-r!"

The attention of several chance pedestrians had been attracted, and the bearing William, breaking into an agonized half trot, disappeared round the corner. Then Jane retired within the house, feeling that she had done her duty. It would be his own fault if he got wet.

Rain was coming. Rain was in the air and in Jane's hope.

She was not disappointed. Mr. Genesis, so secure of fair weather in the morning, was proved by the afternoon to be a bad prophet. The fat cloud copulant army assailed the vault of evil complexion and devastating lumber. The rain came with a swish, then with a rattle and then with a roar, while people listened at their garret doorways and marveled. Window panes turned to running water—It poured.

Then it relented, and out came the children. Shouting, they ran to the flooded gutters. Here were rivers, lakes and oceans for navigation. Jane's timely boat was one of the first to reach the water.

Her mother had been kind, and Jane, when with a rattle and then with a roar, while people listened at their garret doorways and marveled. Window panes turned to running water—It poured.
