

Hall a short time ago launched out into the manufacture of Ready-Made Clothing on their own account. The success of this venture has been most marked. Today in addition to manufacturing for the needs of their own large retail trade, they have a large wholesale connection to supply. Each season new territory is opened up, the product of the factory being well received, business in this Department being ever on the increase.

One very important thing to remember in connection with the manufacturing part of the business is this:

It placed Oak Hall Clothing Store in a position not possessed by any other hereabouts, in that it is enabled to supply its retail patrons with clothing at manufacturers' prices, admitting of great saving in price.

Eighty-three years have passed since James Scoullar departed this life, taken away just as he was preparing to enjoy the results of his labors in the building he had erected for the purpose of increasing his facilities for carrying on his business as a Clothier and as a comfortable home for his family, yet could he revisit the scene of his early life he would still find in the same situation prepared for himself, a business of the nature of his own, yet far exceeding anything he ever could have conceived possible in that vocation.

On January 19th, 1909, the Oak Hall Clothing Store will have completed Twenty years of business life, and by next May it will have occupied its
