of a lazy man and is in the way of an industrious one," wrote William Morris, and it was also one of his maxims that if houses were built as they should be we should want but a little furniture and be happy in that scantiness. In "The Lesser Arts of Life" he

"The arrangement of our houses ought surely to express the kind of life we lead or desire to lead. Our furni-ture should be good citizens' furniture, solid and well made in workmanship and in design should have nothing about it that is not easily defensible, no monstrosities or extravagances, not even of beauty, lest we weary of it. As to matters of construction, it should not have to depend on the special skill of a very picked workman or the superexcellence of his glue, but be made on the proper principles of the art of joinery; also I think that, except for very movable things, like chairs, it should not be so very light as to be nearly imponderable; it should be made of timber rather than walking sticks."

Spoke Too Late. An old New England farmer's wife lay a-dying after seventy years of life and fifty years of steady drudgery as housekeeper and mother. As the end grew visibly near the husband stooped o her ear, the tears forcing their way from his eyes and down his rugged

Ah, my brothers, tell the faithful,

Would You Be a Fidget? Beautiful women learn calmness and composure. They never wiggle their feet or play with their thumbs, but repose in a chair. Women with a propensity to fidget should cultivate the habit of sitting perfectly still in a chair with their hands loosely clasped in their laps. A quiet, reposeful manner s more to be desired than riches. Fidgety women have nervous fingers, which apparently must always be doing something-playing with a chain worn around the neck, beating a tattoo on the lap, crumbling the bread at ainner or otherwise occupied in irritating the nerves of other people.

Your Grievances.

If you want to be loved, keep any grievances you may have to yourself. A woman with sorrows may be interesting, but a woman with a grievanc is quickly voted a bore. Weeping, sad eyed heroines are all very nice in nov-els, for one need not have more of their society than he likes, but every day life cheeriness is in demand, and the woman or girl who bravely determines to find the silver lining of every cloud is rewarded by gaining the respect and love of her fellows.

Artistically Treated and Converted Into a Bookcase.

The accompanying illustration from Good Housekeeping presents the artistic treatment of a window whose original control of the inal purpose was abandoned on account of the erection of a brick wall outside which shut off the view and light. An opening was left a foot and a half deep at the top of the old window casing. In this was fitted a sash

WINDOW CONVERTED INTO A BOOKCASE divided in three sections and set with tricolored glass, red, yellow and green Each section was covered with a slight framework in imitation of diamond panes. The transom was not quite so wide as the original opening, making it necessary to board in the sides diag-onally from the front to meet it, which arrangement helped to efface the out line of the old window. The small window was furnished with hinges at the top and opened outward, thereby making a most useful ventilator. On the highest shelf were placed two or three decorative pieces and immediately below it a brass rod for the curtains of crimson wool, which shield the remaining shelves and their books. Beneath the original window sill stands a long, narrow box upholstered with the same warm color. This carries the bookcase effect to the floor, making a convenient resting place and receptacl for papers and magazines. Women In the Post Office, The largest number of women em ployees in any line of work are em-ployed in the United States postal service. Some of the highest salarled women in the world are employed thus. More than one-third of them are past middle age, and many are past seventy years. Many of the women are mail wagon drivers, having long and lone-some trips in uninhabited parts of the country. In great numbers they are employed in the rural free delivery Nearly all the experts in the dead letter office are women. They have to perform tasks which to the average person would seem impossible. It is their duty to take charge of the pieces of mail which go astray every year, and they must see that these waifs get to their proper destinations if possible, and if not they are returned to the senders. Many of the rural post offices are intrusted to women. The work is usually light, and it is the general opin ion that women in such positions have performed the best work for the de-

Stories For the Little Ones. Every mother should put aside one hour a day in which to read or tell stories to her children. It is best to have the same time every day. In many homes where this has been the rule from babyhood the story hour is looked forward to by the children as the best one of the day. Often neighbors' children are gathered in, and a valuable missionary work may be done in this way for children whose mothers do not or cannot take time to read to them. In families where the children are of different ages and sexes it is sometimes difficult problem to find books which will interest all, but by a little judicious selection this can usually be manchild's own reading along the individual lines which have special interes for him.-Chicago Tribune.

For the Nursery. A source of great amusement in a nursery is an improvised drawing board made of a width of unbleached muslin. This is tacked as firmly as possible to the wall with brass headed tacks. To go with this a box of colored chalks with which to draw the pictures will give much pleasure to a little embryo artist. The drawings may be rubbed out with the same kind of sheep's wool eraser as is used on the blackboard in the schoolroom. This contrivance is so simple and inexpensive and yet gives so much pleasure that it is well worth considering.

Soft ribbons, such as liberty sating taffeta and peau de sole, may be washed to look about as good as new. Prepare a basin of warm water and cas-tile scapsuds and soak the ribbons without mixing colors, of course, for fifteen minutes. Spread them one at a time on a smooth surface and scrub gently with a soft nailbrush. Rinse in clear water and press the water out between folds of cloth. Iron between two towels with a moderately hot iron A few drops of vinegar in the rinsing water will keep the ribbons stiff.

The Baby's Nerves. One cannot be too careful about shielding infants from all excitement shielding infants from all excitement. At their tender age the brain is most susceptible, and dangerous impressions may be made which time will not erase. One should avoid telling young children such stories as "Jack, the Giant Killer." Bring them up to entertain no unreasonable fears, for it is not an uncommon thing that children are frightened into nervous affections, convulsions or St. Vitus' dance.

Handkerchiefs should be ironed while very damp and dried by the iron. Thus will they acquire a certain stiffness and will keep clean longer.

Soap should never be rubbed on silk underwear. Put the garments in soap-suds and squeeze gently between the fingers. They should be pressed on the wrong side with a moderately hot iron. Should women in the hunting field ride astride? Those chiefly concerned have more or less settled the point b leciding that they may if they wish for there is an appreciable number of vomen in England today who habitual ly ride astride after hounds. They do o not with the desire to look manly but simply because it is easier to do hard day's hunting seated firmly astrice than seated sideways. The fem nine appearance is strictly preserved by an ingenious arrangement of the skirt, which falls on either side of the horse. After all, ladies do not ride bi cycles sideways. Accidents to women who ride astride are few and far be tween. The point of the hunting habinowadays is that it must have a safety skirt which shall prevent its wearer be ng "hung up" in case of accident. The safety skirt is, as a matter of fact, no skirt at all, but a covering more o ess of the apron type that simulate the old flowing drapery habit of years ago, which was the cause of so many agonizing accidents to women in the unting field.-Philadelphia Inquirer

The eye of a newborn infant turns at once toward the light, significant in more ways than one of the future needs of its being. The eyes of a baby at birth are but imperfectly developed: the eyebrows and eyelashes are short and thin; the cyclids are almost trans parent and allow much light to pass through them; the iris is very imp fect and lacks the pigment which comes with the growth of the baby. It is the lack of this pigment that makes the eyes of all newborn infants of the same color-namely, a dark blue. The light, which is the natural stim-ulus to the eye, if too strong becomes an enemy to the young. Infants should learn to use their eyes little by little, the same as they learn to use their limbs. The resting place of the baby should be turned away from the light of the window and so directed that no strong rays of light will fall directly on the eye. Especially should the eyes be protected from artificial light.

Children's Reading

Many mothers fail to realize the importance of carefully supervising their children's reading. They seem to forget that properly selected food for the brain is as necessary as suitable nour-ishment for the body. If from the beginning only the best books are put into the child's hands a taste for the best will be cultivated which will stand him in good stead through life. Later, when he is left free to browse for himself in libraries stocked with all sorts and con ditions of books, he will naturally se lect the good from the bad. Books serve many purposes in child's development aside from the cul-tivation of good taste in literature and the accumulation of knowledge. The wise mother knows that they are her greatest allies in cultivating patriotism in quickening the imagination and in developing humor. She also realize that she can make her child strong morally by means of stories as in no other way .- Chicago Tribune.

Social Functions.

"The most successful social functions are those managed by a host and a hostess," says a society scribe, "not by either alone. Leave a man to make up a party and he is sure to forget that Mrs. B. was engaged to C. before she married D., and that Mrs. C. is aware of this fact, and that the D.'s and E.'s have long been at daggers drawn, and he will have no eyes to detect the designs of Mrs. H. On the other hand, a woman gets nervous and fatigued with the constant effort to keep the ball rolling and fails just where a man would succeed. What is vanted is a division of labor, and if this were done oftener there would be less disappointment on the part of entertainers and entertained."

Women Who Ride Astride.

Hangnails.
Fingers that would otherwise be pretty are often disfigured by hangnails.
Nothing can well be uglier than these little red tags of flesh at the corners of little red tags of fiesh at the corners of one's nails. Sometimes they are caused by pushing the skin down when it is dry or using a sharp instrument, like the edge of a pair of scissors. When the skin has grown upon the nail soak the finger tips in warm water for five minutes, then push it down gently with the town. If one makes use of this the towel. If one makes use of this gentle process two or three times a day or remembers to dry the ends of the fingers by rubbing down instead of up the nails ought to keep a good shape without the danger of making hang-nails.
