NEWS OF WORLD TOLD IN BRIEF

British Line Thrown across South Gallipoli Peninsula Isolating Sedd-el-Bahr

"IS DEFINITELY STOPPED"

German Attempt to Break Allies' Lines at Ypres at an End Says Sir John French in Report.

The Allies have made rapid progress in their land and sea attack upon the Dardanelles, the gateway to Constantinople. Already the British troops have thrown a line across the southern extremity of the Gallipoli Peninsula from the coast of the Aegean Sea to a point northeast of Eski Hisarlik, the strongly fortified position facing the Straits, thus isolating the Turkish stronghold at Sedd-el-Bahr, at the very lips of the Dardanelles, which had previously been destroyed by the fire from the fleet.

"Our operations, in conjunction with the French, have definitely stopped the German attack," says Field-Marshal Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British forces on the Continent, in announcing the conclusion of the latest German attempt to break through the allied lines around Ypres and along the Yser Canal, which brought about one of the most sanguinary battles of the war.

One hundred members of the Glasgow Officers' Training Corps will begin to-night a self-imposed task of making shells, in response to the appeal from Earl Kitchener for unlimited amounts of ammunition. These volunteers belong to the best families of Glasgow, and most of them will go to the shell factory in their own automobiles. They have undertaken to work six-hour shifts, after a preliminary course of training.

"The declaration of war was solely man's affair; let the bringing about of peace be woman's work." This was the great theme of the International Congress of Women at The Hague yesterday. After active routine work, under the unanimously chosen chair-woman, Miss Jane Adams, of Chicago, who gratefully thanked the delegation for the honor they had conferred upon her, many theoretical resolutions were adopted at the forenoon meeting.

The Prussian military organ, the Kreuz Zeitung, and the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Cologne Gazette, copies of which have been received in London, all admit that the Germans used asphyxiating gases, which they justify. The Frankfurter Zeitung contends that it is more humane to employ such bombs, which it says produce a quick and painless death, than to pour a hurricane of shells on a single spot to destroy and break to atoms everything living there.

The German Supreme Court has confirmed the sentence of death imposed December 29 on William Lonsdale, of Leeds, England, a private in the British Army for attacking a German non-commissioned officer at the military prison camp at Dierkerke. The verdict of the court is subject to the approval of Emperor William, and the sentence possibly will be commuted. Ronald D. Heavens, second secretary of the United States Embassy, attended the session of the court.

Answering a question in the British House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Neil Primrose, under-secretary for foreign affairs, declared that the Foreign Office had no official information to confirm the recent reports that Austria had approached Russia, directly or indirectly, for separate terms of peace.
