OBITUARY

MRS. FRANCES MACKLIN

Mrs. Frances Macklin, widow of the late William Macklin, of Stratford, died at her home, 221 Huron street, May 29. By her death one of Stratford's most esteemed residents has been removed.

The deceased was a lady of estimable qualities. Gifted with strong religious principles and rare tact, she made her home a centre of refinement, in whose atmosphere, she trained to virtuous habits, the many beautiful souls committed to her guidance.

An active social worker, she was prompt, generous and indescriminating, at the call of those in need. Many were the recipients of her charity, who on hearing that the Angel of Death, had deprived them of their loved benefactress, came to pay a tribute of love and gratitude to her, whose very presence, had brought them relief in sorrow or distress. Uniting our voices with the prevers of her poor we say that the prevers of her poor we say it as a solution of the trying distress. Uniting our voices with the prayers of her poor we say, "May her sweet spirit rest in peace." Mrs. Macklin leaves to mourn their loss seven children, six step-children, one brother four sisters and eight grand children. They are as follows: Frank of Stratford; Clarence of Detroit; Olive (Sister St. Joseph) of Loratta Com. (Sister St. Joseph), of Loretto Community, Toronto; Margaret, Southampton; Mrs. P. C. Hagarty of Windsor; May (Mother Francis de Sales), of the Ursuline Order, rocession, which then returned to he church, where the Blessed larger remained exposed all uring the day.

CHAPEL FOR BRITISH EMPIRE EXHIBITION

London, May 29.—A Catholic chapel is to be erected in the grounds of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

Visitors from America and elsewhere had expressed surprise that the Catholics of England should have lost so brilliant an opportunity as that afforded by the Exhibition to bring the Church to the notice of the millions who will visit Wembley this summer.

Dublin, June 1.—M. Albert Dupreaux, of Paris, who has undertaken to compile from the archives of the French War Office the first authentic history of the Irish Brigades in the service of France, is making rapid progress with his task. He has put aside all his other work on French military of hitherto unpublished material of the greatest interest, but has been making excellent progress with its arrangement in book form.

One of the most difficult of psy-chological feats is to write simply chological feats is to write simply enough for the child to understand. Especially is this so in reducing theological concepts to conform to the limited knowledge of the young mind. Yet Father Weigand has succeeded admirably in doing this very thing. A book which may be considered an answer to the frequent non-Catholic question: "Just what do Catholics mean when they say, as part of the Apostles' Creed, 'I believe . . . in the Communion of Saints'?"; and again, the one and only reply to the eternal query which rises from no particular sect but is just one of those matters we all want to see definitely settled: 'Can we communicate with our dead, and they with us, -and if so,
