FEARFUL ACCIDENT DURING AUTO RACE

AUTOMOBILE COLLIDES WITH BRIDGE, KILLING TWO PERSONS

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 7.—A race between two big autos from Milwaukee to Okauchee, a distance of about 25 miles, with a supper and prize of $25 as stakes, ended in a frightful accident to one of the cars, which resulted in the death of two of its occupants and painful though not fatal injuries to two others. The machine which was with an accident collided with a bridge, which spans Elm Creek, near Brookfield Junction, about ten miles west of Milwaukee. The wrecked car is owned by Alderman Koerner, while Frank Mulken owns the other machine which reached the opposite starting safety. Former Alderman Joseph Kurbrecht, of Milwaukee, was instantly killed. Those injured were: Horace Mulken, son of a former Milwaukee judge; "Paddy" Dorrell, a light promoter, and Geo. Fossa, chauffeur.

It is supposed that the steering gear of the auto became jammed, and at a cross road the car left the road and was overturned into the ditch.

THE OPTIMIST

Little Talks on Life

Just a moment, my friend. Did you know that anyone says: "It's no use. Everything seems to be against me?" Of course, you never said such a thing yourself! Of course not! but then...

Did you ever hear anyone else say that? And after hearing it, did you ever take the trouble to look into the sayer's reasons for so speaking? If not, make it a point to do so the next time you are tripped up by this well-worn statement. You will be interested and instructed.

Did you ever see a man rowing a boat up stream? The how he had to pull at the oars and strain, and how every time he lifted the shiny blades out of the water the current got in a little finer work.

Now, you've heard that good old graduation gag about the river of life. I suppose it's just as well to call it a river of life, or a sea, or a sea of any of the antique standbys. And you know, do you not, that the same natural laws, which apply to the Delta river of the Schuylkill apply to this stream on which you and I are adrift? The river of life flows into the sea of eternity, or whatever that means, beyond the place where the boat you are in happens to capsize. And if your prow is pointed with the current, the river of life is as easy as a breeze and pleasant stream to navigate.

If necessity compels you to row up stream, the task is no trifling one, but there are many good things to be got in this direction which would not be had at all did you float down with the current.

Remember this when you have to strain at the oars.

And remember, my friend that EVERYTHING is never against any one.

I suppose there isn't a soul alive who has not something to combat. Sometimes the very one you envy is the one who is fighting hardest. The battle is not fought out in the open, but it's a peaceful struggle, and those secret struggles are the meanest of all. You know!

The main point with the man who is struggling, however—and that means most any man you meet—is this—something is always with him, no matter how much may be against him.

And that something is the man himself.

Many persons do not know how to make use of the things they possess within.

They have hoped a little and simply because they had a few hopes happened to be blasted, they have desisted hope as a sham. They have believed a job, and meted because they have been disappointed a few times they have joined the doubters. They have been slightly charitable, but seeing a smaller return of gratitude than they had expected they have cut out the open heart and substituted for it a Harveysteel steel affair with a time lock which is set for the day of judgment.

Let us hope they have given Gabriel the combination.

When a fellow tells you everything is against him, put it down in your little book that he himself is against everything. That's the only way such a state of affairs can ever come to pass.

Of course, if a man insists on taking the windward side of every circumstance that comes along, he's going to get hit hard, and have many of his possessions and maybe of his patience blown away. But he who accepts the place that comes along in the natural order of events and does the best he knows how to make it pleasant and profitable place, even though he fall in the attempt, will never be reduced to the poverty of wanting to make such a remark as this.

Cheer up. Something is always WITH you.

GROUND TO PIECES BY SPECIAL TRAIN

BANKER'S SPECIAL RUNS DOWN CARRIAGE, GRINDING OCCUPANTS TO BITS

ALLANBURST, N. J., Aug. 7.—Four employees of the Norwood Hotel were killed tonight when their carriage was run down by a Pennsylvania passenger train known as "the bankers' special" at the Cortes avenue crossing here. They were Thos. Edwards, driver, and Loretta Grace, Jennie McDonald, and Hanna Murphy, waitress. Edwards had stopped his team at the crossing where an excursion train blocked the road. As the excursion train drew out Edwards started his horses and the carriage was squarely on the rails when the flyer, its approach hidden by the opposite moving special, tore across the roadway. The horses, carriage and occupants were ground to bits.

SHORTAGE OF FARM HELP

Scarcity of Labor in Manitoba General. Good Wages Offered

WINNIPEG, Aug. 9.—This August there is again a shortage of farm help and the demand over supply is considerable. It is not as great as it was last year, still it is quite large enough to require public attention. Inquiries at the immigration office show that there are over 300 places for which they cannot find labor. The scarcity of labor in Manitoba is general, but worse in some districts than in others. It is not so acute, it does not appear to be so acute. The wages offered here from $20 to $25 per month for experienced men and for inexperienced, $25 to $30.

POPE'S CORONATION ANNIVERSARY

WAS CELEBRATED IN SISTINE CHAPEL WITH GREAT POMP AND MAGNIFICENCE

ROME, Aug. 9.—The anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius was celebrated today in the Sistine Chapel with deep religious solemnity, great pomp, and magnificence. The cardinal secretary of state, Cardinal Merry del Val, officiated. The Pope was seated on a throne, while the choir under Mgr. Perosi, consisting of specially trained boys and also members of the American College of Rome, sang beautifully without the accompaniment of instruments.

A contemporary talks of the equality of the sexes. Equality! Why, woman is superior to man. Man was made out of clay, but woman was made out of man.

PITCHED BATTLE JAPS--MEXICANS

FOUGHT AT RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION CAMP. FOUR KILLED. SIX MORTALLY WOUNDED

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 9.—A telegram received late last night announces that at El Fuste, a construction camp of the Kansas City, Mexican and Orient Railway, a pitched battle took place between gangs of Japanese and Mexican workmen, in which three Japanese were killed and three seriously wounded. Three Mexicans are mortally wounded and one killed. The trouble is said to have started seven days ago when a dispute arose between a Japanese and a Mexican.

Origin of Old Tavern Signs

For many centuries no other sign than the bush—a bunch of ivy or evergreens—hung over the door of town and country inns alike.

The bush was very common in ancient Rome. Its popularity seems to have spread in all the provinces of the old Roman empire, and it has remained a distinctive sign in these islands and on the continent ever since.

But while the roadside hostleries were content with a bunch of foliage, the innkeepers of the more distinguished towns and cities, where taverns or inns were often close proximity to the mansions of the nobles, whose residence was near the inn, would usually be put up over the door to attract the eye of the noble or patrician. Thus at Lewis, the Three Pelicans took its name from the fact that these birds constituted the arms of the Pelham family.

In many cases, however, the innkeeper as well as the traveller, being unacquainted with the mysteries of heraldry, lion gules or lion azure, went by the name of Red Lion or Blue Lion while the two leopards argent in the arms of the Howard family, were familiarly called the Cats. The numerous lions, bulls and dragons of all shades, as well as maples, crosses and crests, which have survived to the present day have all some heraldic origin.

The Royal Arms were of course, a favorite sign then as they are now, and the crown is undoubtedly one of the oldest English signs. In 1297 a certain Walter Walters, who kept the Crown Inn at Ipswich, was familiarly called the Cats. The numerous lions, bulls and dragons of all shades, as well as maples, crosses and crests, which have survived to the present day have all some heraldic origin.

The different kings and queens' heads which have adorned English inns for the last five centuries are too numerous to mention. Henry VIII and Queen Elizabeth have been by far the most popular figures of all royal modern signboards, the former being usually represented as a merry, bloated Bacchus and the personification of jollity and good cheer.

After royal heraldic signboards, none were more numerous in medieval England than those of a religious character. Besides the Annunciation, the Nativity, the Virgin Mary, the Crucifixion, church gates and church style inns, which are still to be met with in the country, there were many dedicated to the virgin, saints and dignitaries of the church.

The Salutation was a very popular sign in the pre-Reformation times, representing the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary. Even now this sign is still to be seen, one of the best hotels in the Lake district, displaying it to this day. But it was almost universally changed soon after the Reformation for the Angel, the Virgin Mary being left alone on the board.

Curiously enough, many other tavern signs of Catholic England retained their popularity during and after the Reformation. Such are the Cross Keys, a sign which is far from common now, and which is intended for the keys of St. Peter, the papal arms. The Pope's Arms and the Pope's Head also survived the Reformation, there were four Pope's Head taverns in London in 1038, the most famous of which was that in Cornhill, which dated back to the reign of Edward III, and was not definitely pulled down until the close of the eighteenth century.

The Cardinal's Hat was the sign of a London tavern situated in Lombard street in 1459. "This sign became common when the popularity of Cardinal Wolsey was at its height; but there are no such signs in England known to date back to the present time. The signboards representing saints and martyrs.

St. George with or without a dragon is the most popular in England, and St. Patrick in Ireland, while the Scots are fond of raising St. Andrew to the dignity of a pub-house sign, the same being also true of the Welsh saint David.

One of the oldest religious signboards of the kind of which is not commonly known, is the Catherine Wheel, sometimes denominated the Cat and Wheel, which was originally introduced as a dedication to St. Catherine. This martyr was placed between the wheel armed with spikes, a device which was adopted in the Turner's Arms.

St. Martin, the patron of vintners, was often seen on signboards, as also

WHEN YOU FAIL TO GET THE 'HUNGRY FEELING'

It is time for you to consult an A.B.C. box of Salted Sodas—a biscuit that is the very life of wheat and with just a filmy coating of refined salt. Just eat one; it will give you an appetite. It will make you feel as though you should eat. Eat one biscuit and you will be hungry. Then, too, when you patronize A.B.C. LADY LAURIE.

Lady Laurier, wife of the Premier of Canada, is described in the Ladies' Realm as "a stately, white-haired woman, endowed with all the alertness and natural grace of her French lineage." As her photographs indicate a decidedly stout lady, something may be allowed for the proverbial gush of the English journalist. But she undoubtedly possesses the white hair mentioned and has rather more than that degree of stateliness inevitable in all large bodies.

Though of French origin, Lady Laurier speaks English almost as well as her husband does. Educated at the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Montreal, she remains a strict Roman Catholic, but without bigotry or narrowness.

She is proud of her French descent, although she has never, had the tact to aim at breaking down any approach to a barrier between the two races in Canada.

When the Dominion Parliament is sitting Lady Laurier lives at her Ottawa residence in Laurier avenue, a large, square house typical of the style of architecture which prevailed in Upper Canada half a century ago. During the session Lady Laurier calls daily at the House of Commons to drive Sir Wilfrid home. The Canadian Prime Minister and his wife are fond of city life and society, and their happiest times are spent at their country home, Athabascaville.

This comfortable little two-story, red brick house stands on a knoll in the midst of park land, much of which is left in its primeval ruggedness. Democratic simplicity marks their life when they escape from the heat and dust of the Ottawa season to the calm of this rural retreat, and they receive their guests every day on the piazza with a dignity and hospitality characteristic of Canadians.

Lady Laurier lives among her plants and flowers and domestic pets and is known in all the country around as a kind and delightful neighbor. She has no family of her own, but delights in gathering children around her. She is never seen on political platforms or signing her name to a magazine article, but her influence is none the less real and far-reaching.—New York Sun.
