HIS UNHAPPY WIFE.

Haydn, the Composer, Married her Merely to Oblige Her Father.

He Found her Decidedly Pessimistic in her Views of Himself and His Possibilities of Living Long.

Haydn married not the girl he was in love with, but her sister. "Haydn, you should take my oldest daughter," said Father Keller, the barber, and, as Keller had done a good deal for Haydn, the composer felt that he must sacrifice his affection on the altar of duty and oblige the old man. At the time of the marriage, in 1760, Haydn was 29, while his Anna Maria was 32. There does not appear to have been much love on either side to start with, but Haydn declared that he had really begun to "like" his wife and would have come to entertain a stronger feeling for her if she had behaved in a reasonable way. Unfortunately, Anna Maria had neither rhyme nor reason in her composition. The entertaining Marcella says that the majority of ladies married to men of genius are so vain of the abilities of their husbands that they are frequently insupportable. But Frau Haydn was not a lady of that kind. The world had emphatically proclaimed her husband a genius, but to Maria it was quite immaterial whether he were a cobbler or an artist. Nay, she even committed the terrible crime of using the composer's manuscript scores for curling paper, as underlays for pastry and similar things! She was gay enough with it all too.

When Haydn went from home, she would send him the most cheerful little notes. "Should you die today or tomorrow," ran one of these missives, "there is not enough money left in the house to bury you." At another time, when Haydn was in London, he received a letter in which Maria wrote that she had just seen a neat little house which she liked very much and that he might do himself the pleasure to send her 2,000 gulden with which to buy it. So as to have in future a "widow's home." Pleasant reading this for the genial composer! In the first case he wrote without a trace of anger: "Should this be so take my manuscripts to the music publisher. I guarantee you that they will be worth money enough to defray my funeral expenses." In the matter of the "widow's home" he thought it would be best to arrange things himself. Ultimately he bought the house, and in spite of Maria's frequent suggestion of his coming dissolution he lived in it for nine years after she had been dead. Frau Haydn saw out her 70 years, but some time before that the pair had agreed to live apart as the best way of ending a union which had proved utterly unbearable to the composer.

IT IS A NEW IDEA.

A Prominent English Oculist Says That Eyes are Expressionless

Their Changing Effects are Caused Entirely by the Lids

There are no expressive eyes. The expression of the eye is really in the lid. The eye itself, independent of its surroundings, has no more expression than a glass marble. A prominent English oculist makes this daring statement, and he defends his position with emphasis. "The eyes have no expression whatever," he says. "How do you explain the fact that the eyes of one person are more expressive than those of another? I am asked. They are not. The difference consists in certain nervous contractions of the lids peculiar to the individual.

"Observe for yourself and you will see that I am right. We will say that I am greatly interested in something, and my attention is suddenly called from it by an unexpected interruption. My upper eyelid raises itself just a little, but the eye proper does not change an iota in its appearance. If the interruption is but momentary, the elevation of the lid will be but momentary. If the surprise caused by the interruption is continued, the lid may be raised even a little more, and, in fact, the whole of the forehead, including the eyebrows, is raised and wrinkled. But the eye remains the same.

"When a person is excited, much the same emotions are gone through," continues the doctor. "His eyes are open wide, in cases of intense excitement, to their greatest extent, but the forehead is not wrinkled, and the ball of the eye is as expressive as a bit of glass. No more.

"Observe the face of one who laughs. You will see that the lower eyelid has no muscle of its own, and it is only by the contraction of the adjacent muscles in smiling or laughing that it is made to move. That is the reason that there are many wrinkles about the eyes of merry persons.

"The expression of deep thoughtfulness is produced by the drooping of the upper lid. The lids of some persons fall so low that the pupil of the eye itself is the same. If the meditation is over a subject that worries the thinker, the expression is again quite different. The eyelids contract, and the eyebrows are lowered and drawn together. This is true of a reflective mood.

"As to emotional moods, there is the expression of anger, for instance. The eyes, instead of closing, are open wider than they are normally, but the brows are closely knit.

"In expressing sadness, the entire upper eyelid comes about half way down, and the folds of the skin collect there, giving the lid a thick, heavy appearance."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

FRUIT-FLOWERS

ATTRACTIVE BULBS.

Brilliant and Graceful—Fine For the House and Border.

Although most of our bulbous plants bloom in the spring, there are several (besides the familiar late flowering gladioli) which require the warmth of summer to open their blossoms. These are flowers that are not found in every garden, yet they are singularly beautiful, with the rare glow of the tropics, and well worth the slight trouble they need in cultivation. The calochortis, Mariposa lilies or butterfly tulips, as they are variously called, for instance, have a delicate grace of their own, a

CALOCHORTIS FLOWERS WITH FERNS.

One of their richly tinted blossoms reminding one of a dight of oriental butterflies, so pure and varied are their colors and so exquisite the pencillings of their petals.

The bulbs are planted in the autumn and, though they are hardy, should be protected with ashes or with litter during the winter. Planting in May is also practiced. They grow freely in a light, sandy loam, well drained and with a warm sunny aspect. They are also successfully grown in cold frames and form a very handsome show when grouped six or eight in a five inch pot for winter flowering.

Of the many varieties of calochortis, Venus pictus, here represented, is one of the most beautiful. The flowers are creamy white, with pencillings of crimson in the cup of the flower and an eyelike spot on each petal of rich red brown, which gives it a specially elegant effect.

Then the pale yellow variety (C. venustus citrinus) and the pink and purple tinted flowers of the same group (C. venustus rosea and purpurea) are all most beautiful, their blossoms being specially useful for cutting, as they last for some days in water, one bulb producing in some instances as many as 30 blossoms during the season.

C. venustus oculatus, a rose colored flower with a deep black eye, surrounded by yellow, is remarkably strong and vigorous, while vesta, which produces the largest flowers of this section, in pale pink, and Vesta alba, pure white, are both among the hardiest of these plants.

Drying Out of Twigs in Winter.

It has probably not occurred to many people that trees are damaged by drying out during very severe weather while the ground is frozen. Professor Waugh of Vermont points out that the ground may be so thoroughly full of frost that no water at all, or at most, very little, can be taken up by the tree. Yet at the same time a measurable quantity is being constantly lost by evaporation through the bark, especially through the thin bark of young twigs. He says Professor Bailey calculates that a large apple tree loses daily through the winter about half a pint of water.

If the ground remains frozen so that no water can be supplied, the tree may easily become so thoroughly dried out as to suffer great damage, and, according to Professor Waugh, without doubt much winter damage to twigs of young fruit trees is caused by drying in this way instead of by freezing. The tissues become so dry that in spring they cannot recover.

How to Gather Apples.

Never shake the fruit from the tree, and never pack for market any apples that have fallen from the tree. Gather every apple by hand and place it carefully in a basket. The apple growers north use ladders, made on the place, of a light pine pole split some distance from the butt end and rungs stuck in to keep the lower end apart, while the entire upper part is but a single pole with rungs stuck through. This kind of a ladder can be stuck in anywhere on the tree and makes it possible to reach all the apples. It is simply like a long wagon pole with rungs stuck through. The gatherer takes a light basket and lets it down by a rope when full. The barrels are taken into the orchard and packed right there.—Professor Massey of North Carolina.

Planting Peach Trees.

Some New Jersey peach growers report excellent results from setting peach trees in fall, but spring setting is more generally practiced. In either case care should be taken when setting to have the roots well spread and to fill all air spaces; also to thoroughly firm the soil with the feet. This point is very important. Firming not only holds the tree in place, but prevents drying out of the soil about the roots.

Planting Hardy Shrubs.

Eleagnus longipes, or wild olive, with its bright red fruits and foliage of silvery green, and Clethra alnifolia, which has been described as the sweetest of American flowers, are both valuable shrubs.

A Popularity that Increases With Mighty Strides

Diamond Dyes first in all Points That Make Perfection.

Notwithstanding the fact that imitation and crude package dyes and soap-grease dyes are before the public giving true, uniform, and honest goods—when the Diamond Dyes increase with mighty strides.

Those who have the misfortune to try any of the inferior dyes sold by some dealers know well how deceptive they prove. The users are utterly disappointed and disappointed. Their work with these common dyes show muddy and dull colors, and anger is kindled because valuable garments and materials are spoiled.

The Diamond Dyes, simple and easy to use, have a standard of excellence that no others can approach. They give true, uniform, and honest results when used in the mansion or cottage. Bright, clear and brilliant colors are always obtained on all kinds of goods—all wool, all cotton, or mixed goods—when the plain directions are followed.

Do not be deceived by any dealer when he offers you something just as good as the Diamond Dyes. There are no other dyes in the world that can equal the "Diamond"; no others that can so successfully make old things new.

More Cases of Kidney Disease Cured in Queen City than in Any Other in the Province

Alexander Brown, 119 Elzabeth St., Cured of Rheumatism—Found no Other Remedy Would Help Him—Two Boxes Fined Him.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—This city is the home of the great world-remedy Dodd's Kidney Pills. The discovery of the medicine that would act on the kidneys was made here, and here is where Dodd's Kidney Pills made their first move. It is interesting to note the fact that a greater number of cures from the different forms of Kidney Disease is made in Toronto than in any other town in Ontario.

This is a significant fact. Dodd's Kidney Pills were introduced here. They have been known longer in Toronto therefore than anywhere else. If they were not a sterling remedy it is impossible to suppose that they would have had anything but a temporary favor in this city.

So far from this being the case, however, they have become the popular medicine here. They are in greater demand in the drug stores of Toronto to-day than they have ever been before.

Alexander Brown, 119 Elizabeth St., Toronto, says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism for three years, also with pains in my back. I have tried several remedies but could not get any relief. I have used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am now a well man."

STORIES OF THE DAY.

Corporal Tanner's Story of the Old Confederate's Gray Uniform.

"Corporal" James Tanner, says the New York Tribune, told a new story at a private dinner a couple of days ago, an incident of a recent visit to Richmond on his way to the reunion of the Confederate veterans. "You know," said he, "that General Robert E. Lee was recognized as a Christian gentleman by the Southern soldiers, while on the other hand General Jubal Early was quite a profane man. Well, in Richmond I met a Confederate veteran by the name of Tierney, a prosperous and energetic citizen, who related to me an anecdote of a Northern friend, Bill, who, when he heard that Tierney was going to the reunion in his old gray uniform, tried to persuade him to wear a dark suit and offered to pay for it. Finally Tierney said:

"Bill, you know there's lots of accidents on the railroad, and suppose I should get killed with anything but a gray uniform on, it would go hard against me when I reached the heaven's gate. The first one I would see would be General Bob, and he would greet me with a smile that would say, 'Turn back to a frown, and then he would say, 'Tierney, I'm sorry to say it, but you can't come in here for you've gone back on your colors.' Then I'd turn away and go to the other place, and the first one to meet me would be Jubal Early. Well, as soon as he caught sight of my dark clothes he'd begin to swear if I were three miles away—so there'd be no chance for me there. Then what a predicament I'd be in, actually shut out from both places! And here I am in the gray and you're in the blue."

A PAYING BUSINESS.

Two Women Make $9,000 a Year at Dairying.

There are two women who know how to make money at dairying. They live at Belle Meade, in middle Tennessee, which is the biggest, the most beautiful and the most famous stock farm in the world.

Blooded horses have made it famous for seventy-five years. The dairy is a new development. The young women, with their brother, are joint heirs to the estate, which embraces nearly 6,000 acres, enclosed with thirty-five miles of stone walls.

Around the deer park, where 600 odd head of deer roam and browse under the forest primeval, the stone wall is supplemented with a six-foot iron paling.

The cows do not run with the deer. They have richer pastures called their own, meadows knee-deep in lush blue grass and white clover, lying either side of Richmond creek.

There are 150 of them—high-grade Jerseys, or full bloods of the most famous milking strains. The number in milk ranges from ninety to 130. The milking is a pretty sight indeed. The sleek deer-eyed, full-utered, creamy-skinned creatures come in from the pastures and range themselves each in her appointed stall. The stalls fill three sides of a great square. An open shed covers it. Outside there runs a trough for the dry feed, which serves as an appetizer for the abundant grass. In the middle as well as about the pastures there are ironwork baskets, open underneath, each with its lump of pure rock salt.

Five stout and jolly black men do the milking. They are marvelously rapid; still more marvelously skillful. They use deep tin pails, and can make the milk streams play tunes upon the bottom of them—"Yankee Doodle" or "Dixie"—as the hearers incline to hear.

They work in happy rivalry, as to who shall milk quickest and cleanest. As soon as two cows are stripped clean they are sent away to pasture without waiting for the rest.

The milking shed is a good work of the dairy proper, to which the milk is wheeled in deep tin cans, kept scrupulously clean. The dairy itself is a picturesque gray stone building, with ivy upon one wall, and a climbing rose blossoming riotously over the door.

The income is $9,000 a year, "and," says the "squire," "my daughters need that much for pin-money."—Philadelphia Press.

Stylin in Hells.

The ladies cling to the belt with almost as much tenacity as they do to the shirt waist. Indeed the one is a legitimate accompaniment of the other. There are many styles in use. The open metal belt was much worn last year, but is not so common now. The narrow leather belt has also nearly had its day, and the prevailing style is now wider and heavier. Complaint is made because the manufacturers appear to make no effort to produce a shapely belt to gracefully fit the form. Indeed most of those offered in the stores are built on the same lines as those worn by the savage Indians.

Jenny Lind Used to Sleep in This Bed.

There are two splendid pieces of furniture in a Turkish bath establishment in Albany, which are the only reminders of the visit of Jenny Lind to the Knickerbocker capital. There is a ponderous bed of walnut, covered with rare velvet in places, and embellished by pictorial medallions of blue porcelain. Near it is a bureau which supports a mirror six feet high. They are in the Jenny Lind room—the chambre de lue of the establishment, which makes glad the heart of the weary legislator who has the honor of reposing here for the night.

There was a time when the Jenny Lind furniture was celebrated as the finest which could be seen outside of the empire city of New York. Elaborate preparations were made for the reception of the songstress at the old Delavan House. For weeks the hotel proprietor was putting the place in order. It occurred to him that he had no bedroom beautiful enough for the singer. He purchased the furniture at a great price and installed it in all the splendor of its varnish, its veneering and the blue medallions covered with Watteau shepherdesses.

Of course the prima donna was delighted with the accommodations which the innkeeper had provided. She sang the praises of the old Delavan, and the proprietor rubbed his hands and chuckled, for Albany hotel keepers are proud and like to vie with the Bonifaces of Gotham.

It may have been that the presence of the singer charmed the furniture. It is certain that when fire swept through the old Delavan the Jenny Lind apartment was spared and the varnish was unimpaired.

There was a sale of the Delavan furniture a few years ago, and the man who owned the bathing establishment made a bid for the bed and the bureau and got them for a song. So it is in these latter days that when midnight hangs in the zenith weary souls repose in the bed of the blue medallions.
