into the arms of St. Paul's, John Bryan, unable to present it in ordinary language, takes all the fan-cifulness of allegory. Handel, with ordinary music unable to reach the heights of the theme, rises up in an oratorio. Oh, there is no life on earth so happy as a really Christian life. It does not mean a sham Christian life. It means a real Christian life. Where there is a man, there is a whole world of good. Where there is a man, there is a whole world of good. Where there is a man, there is a whole world of good.
Where there is a man, there is a whole
