From Private Thistle.

Private Ralph Thistle, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Thistle, Long's Hill, who was almost smothered by gas in the trenches, while fighting with the Canadians at Ypres, states in a letter to his parents, and dated May 9th, that he was then at the base hospital in Belgium. As he received no injury beyond the gas poisoning it is thought that he has gone back to the firing line again.

Inquest Into Death of Reservist Jos. Benoit.

On Wednesday, May 5th, Dr. Hardman, Coroner of Ramsgate, England, held an official enquiry into the circumstances associated with the death of Joseph Benoit, of Cape St. George, seaman of the Nfld. Royal Naval Reserve, who had been serving on the steam-drifter "Loyal Star," at the time of the accident, already referred to in the Telegram. Joseph Benoit was killed on Tuesday, May 4th, and the enquiry was held on the following day at the Royal Hotel, Ramsgate. Seven witnesses were examined, including John Benoit, a cousin of the deceased who was serving on the same ship and was with Joseph Benoit at the time of the accident. Sub-Lieutenant Lewis, who was in charge of the boat explained that in order to save a ship from striking a mine, rifles would be fired. He said that their boat carried three such rifles and added that any seaman might be expected to handle them. He understood that John Benoit was clearing a rifle when the accident occurred. He left the two boys John and Joseph on watch at 12.30 in the afternoon, and upon hearing one of the boys call out some time afterwards, he found the deceased shot. The other boy seemed very excited about it. He had noticed that they were fast friends and had been great friends before joining the navy. Capt. Grace and William Horne, the mate of the "Loyal Star" were next examined. The latter had noticed that the boys had been great friends. He had also noticed how the death of Joseph Benoit had affected his companion. He was greatly excited and told the commander that he had the rifle on his knee when it became discharged accidentally. The other witnesses gave similar evidence and all stated that the lads were always great friends. John Benoit stated that he was an ordinary seaman on the "Loyal Star" and the deceased had been boys together at Cape St. George and were both 18 years of age. They enlisted together and were always great friends. At the time of the accident he was on watch and the deceased was with him for company. He was sitting with the rifle on his knee and the deceased was standing at his left. He did not think it was loaded, and did not know what made it go off. The boat was rolling and he had to move to keep his balance. He did not think his clothing touched the trigger. The Coroner said that if they accepted one part of the evidence of Benoit, they must accept the other. His superior officers had believed his story. The accident pointed to carelessness but in dealing with boys of 18 under new conditions allowances had to be made. He regretted that this young life given to the service of his country should be lost in such a manner. After a brief deliberation the jury returned a verdict of "Misadventure."

Total Prohibition In Sight.

The Prime Minister has made good his promise and introduced into the House of Assembly a Bill providing for the total prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors to take effect on January 1st, 1917, provided that, when a plebiscite is held during the coming autumn, 40 per cent. of the registered voters favor the measure. The central authority is to be created, and shall have power to import and sell spirits for manufacturing, medicinal and sacramental purposes. The last named, clergymen also, may import wines. Druggists and doctors are to be licensed to sell spirits for medicinal purposes, but must give account monthly to the central authority, who in turn shall report annually to the Legislature. Penalties ranging from $10 to $500, or, in default, imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, are to follow any violation of the Act. If the holding of a plebiscite, 1910, has been voted and the time of a plebiscite is to be not later than Dec. 1st, 1915.

So far as we can judge, the Bill as amended in Committee is all right, and, if put into effect, should effectually remove the liquor curse. The only question is, can 25,000 voters be influenced to go to the polls next fall and vote "yes"? And that is a serious question. It means a large vote than supported the Government in present in power. Any temperance supporter who expects an easy victory
