The Case of Two Rich Men.

two very rich men. John D. Rockefeller on the one hand and Henry Ford on the other? One popular enough to be thought of seriously as presidential candidate; the other elected to the position of p keeper in his old home town.

What has Henry Ford done for hu manity? He established a great industry. He employs thousands of hands at good pay, and he has accumulated millions for himself.

What has John D. Rockefeller done? He established a great industry, employing thousands of hands at good pay, and he accumulated millions. But it is just here that the parallel

So far as known Henry Ford has kept his riches for himself. At least he has never given largely to any great philanthropic movement. Aside from aiding men to earn good wages Henry Ford has done nothing for hu-

On the other hand John D. Rockefeller, through the Rockefeller Foundation, and by other means has expended millions upon millions to aid his fellow man in the most practical and enduring ways. It is said that he has spent half a billion dollars in this manner, more money than has ever been expended by one man in one lifetime in good works. He has advanced the cause of education by endowing colleges. He has given scholarships galore. It was his purse that aided in the fight to eradicate the hook worm and do away with yellow fever, and so on through a large field of endeavor.

By all the rules of the game John D. Rockefeller should be a popular citizen of the United States, and again by all the rules of the game Henry Ford should be most unpopular, but the reverse is the case. It may be alleged that Henry Ford has thousands of agents boosting for him, but the organization founded by Mr. Rockefeller is far larger and many times more powerful than the Ford contingent. So the case cannot rest here on secure ground.

As before stated when a man buys gallon of gasoline for his car his nind wanders instinctively to the same thoughts occur to the many buyers of the Ford car? I doubt it. And still there is greater reason. for while the Ford Company is a one man concern, the Standard Oil corporations are largely owned by the public, by the stock holders, big and side show so to speak

Admittedly the whole question of Object to Sunday human likes and dislikes is a perplexing puzzle, an enigma in psyhology, and the most interesting case extant is that of Rockefeller vs. Ford.

Golf on Civic Links.

Lord's Day Alliance officials who object to Sunday wolf. Why the Alliance through its secretary, world on Sunday is not clear. Golf legally played in Canada on Sunday. and the old English laws upon which our present Sad Sundavites rest their case are responsible for this oversight, as golf was not known in England back in the days when these aws were put on the statute books, Prohibiting golf on a civic links on Sunday, while private clubs may play ad lib, is petty tyranny as well as onsense. In the natural course of events a civic course is played over by those whose circumstances are such that they cannot afford to belong to one of the more expensive private clubs. It may therefore be taken for granted that the men and women who would benefit by the civic course are those who are employed at least five and one half days per week. Eliminate Sunday play and this gives them but one afternoon, Saturday, upon which any great number could participate.

In respect to the opposition of the Lord's Day Alliance it has no legal status when it comes to golf, and this should be clearly understood.

The Passing of the I welve Hour Day

At the recent conference between the officials of the United Mine Workers of America and the Pennsylvania anthracite coal operators many references have been made to the "twelve hour day." Many no doubt have been led to believe that miners do work twelve hours per day, when as a matter of fact the greater number work less than half of this period. The only men around the anthracite mines who work twelve hours per day are those in charge of pumps and fans and perhaps one or two other surface jobs that require supervision rather than manual labor. However, the operators have agreed to work out a plan whereby the twelve hour men, of whom there are three thousand distributed among some two hundred and fifty thousand other employees, shall have their hours cut to eight per day. This merely means that three shifts be employed every twentyfour hours in place of two as at present. If all grievances between master and man could be so easily adjusted as this one this would indeed be a happy world. In the meantime if you burn an
