The Orphans of St Ann's Concert.

It is not often that the Sisters of St Ann ome before the public with an appeal for assistance in their great work. They are scarcely less remarkable for the retiring modesty and unostentation with which they pursue their work of mercy than for the self-sacraficing zeal and dilliplied A dark and thrilling chapter in the gence with which they prosecute the grand that of France. A war with Prussia, object of their lives. Hence it is, perhaps, that their appeals never fail to meet with a response worthy of the high object. The cognition of the poselfish devotion of these ladies and of the good work in which they are so successfully engaged, and it must, ago the most remarkable man of the age therefore, have been a source of gratification and encouragment as well as of real, substantial aid. The subjects of Queen Victoria are accustomed to boast about the excellence of British Justice, and none more than those residing in the distant colonies. In British Columbia the colonfats have been wont to felicitate themselves upon the possession of this value able commodity. They have been led to compare it with that possessed by their neighbors, and have thought all the more of it for the contrast. But the time has arrived when people begin to ask why this Justice should cost so much. It has frequently been asserted in these columns that the scale of free charged in the Supreme Court of this Colony is excessive. Yet it increases doubled at Cariboo ! Between the needless expense consequent upon keeping the two branches of the legal profession separate and the excessive scale of Court fees Justice is virtually placed beyond the poor man's reach. It is a luxury in which only the comparatively well-to-do can afford to indulge. Of course it cannot be said of British Justice that against sin plated with gold the strong lance of justice burtless breaks, whilst 'arm'd in rags a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.' But if you lay it on the upper shelf, beyond the poor man's reach, are not the practical results very much the same? We shall possibly be met with the worn-out plea that to make justice expensive is to discourge a li igioue spirit. But, even if there were anything in it, this does not meet the charge of leaving the poor at the mercy of the rich. Justice is good for the poor /man as well as for the rich. Indeed British Justice is pre-eminently the poor man's right. Let it not only be said that we have British Justice in this distant Colony, but that it is placed within the easy reach of the poorest of the Queen's subjects. If no steps are taken sooner, it will be the duty of the Legislature to revise the scale of Court tees, making them merely nominal, and making them unform throughout the length and breadth of the United Colony. And the Profession would only be studying their own interest by merging the two branches, the separation of which, in a country like this, is simply ridiculoss, Make Justice so cheap that draw from her pure fountains.

Legislative Union.

Prior to and during the time negotiations for a Federal Union were going on the advisability of a Legislative Union of the maritime Provinces was discussed. Since Confederation the feeling has been revived, especially by Nova Scotta. It has been thought that with all the maritime Provinces united into one, the representatives would have greater weight in the Domision councils, and the inces united would be able to extort that ustice which separately they assert is some-times depied them. New Brunswick appears to have taken up the id a in earnest. the Legislative Council on the 27th ulttimo, notice was given of resolutions 'praying the Lieutenant Governor to cause the Executive Council to enter into correspondence with the Executive of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward leland and Newloundland with reference to legislative union of all the Lower Provinces said correspondence to be laid before both Houses within ten days after the opening of the next session. have not wither means of knowing what kind of a reception these resolutions met with at the bands of the Le gielature; but while there would, doubtless, be considerable advantages in such a union, it ocears to us that there is one insuperable obstacle in the way of its present strainment. Two of the provinces referred to are still outside the pale of Confederament might be to sanction the desired union it could only be accomplished by Prince Edward Island and Newfoundiand becoming part of the Dominion. This both have almost declined to do apon terms than which Causes will be in me herry to offer hatter it remains to be seen whether they will be more ready to accept a sort of side lavitation from New Brunewick.
