(From the Gentleman's Magazine.) The allowance of £60,000 a year for the privy purse is the carrying out of a com-mendable generosity with which a great nation treats its sovereign. Every want of the sovereign is already provided for. She has houses to live in, horses to ride, food and wine provided in abundance, servants all paid, £13,000 a year set aside for her dispensations in charity, and a small bal-ance of over £8000 a year left for contin-gencies. ! the ropes cut my fingers, but steadfast I strove, I I reached the low country in search of my love; ere I heard how at Blenheim his heart was so birth.

It will not appear clear to the ordinary mind what channels of expenditure the Queen finds for this £60,000 allotted for the privy purse, nor would it in some cir-cumstances be any business for the ordi-nary mind to trouble itself with the pro-blem. But the question is thrust upon the public by the repeated demand for fresh supplies made on account of the royal family; and as Mr. Fox, neither whose statesmanship nor whose loyalty can be called in question, has put it, "the ques-tion is, Is the civil list inadequate to the purposes of fully maintaining and support-\* The remains of the Irish Jacobite party who three items from which the total of the queen's personal and private income is de-rived are set forth either as parliamentary estimates or in official documents. The  $\pounds 60,000$  from the privy purse is the most familiar sum. Ministers of the crown and others, who from their point of duty very properly endeavor to minimize facts, are accustomed to keep this figure in the fore-front, as if it were the only source of the private income of the queen. I quote the the figures of the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster from the balance-sheet issued on Camphor is well known in the markets camphor is well known in the markets of the world as an articles which is apt to be freely adulterated.
