months ago. I sent to Baltimore some of them with the small ball on the vines, directed to Mr. Skinner, and requested him to send part of them to Mr. Swell, of Boston. In another letter he describes them as being very the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon, the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon, the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon. fine." When boiled they are yellow, and of a good flavor. Dr. Mitchell says he had sent a parcel of the roots to the Hon. Josiah Quincy, who had distributed them amgugsome of the ablest cultivators at Boston,

Now, my object in this communic to ascertain what has become of these wild potatoes?—what success has attended the cultivativation of them? Gan Mr. Skinner or Mr. Quincy, or any other person give any account of them? I can find no account in any publication subsequent to 1826. Perhans some members of the American Institute can give the desired information; if so, will they favor the public through the pages of the Cultivator? H. A. P. A.
