

We have been fortunate enough to have quite a number of guests with us lately. Among them were the Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, Rev. W. G. Wallace, Prof. Farmer, and Mr. Bone. We were glad to see them all, and carry pleasant memories of their helpful words.

On the evening of Easter Monday our Faculty gave a reception to the students and outside friends. Many guests were present. The chapel contained a large number of art studies by the various pupils, who gather daily in the studio under the tuition of Mrs. Dignam and Miss Clarke.

MRS. McMASTER is a friend who never forgets us. Every now and then we receive cheery letters from her, filled with pleasant news of her journeyings, and helpful suggestions as to our practical Christian work at school. We are all delighted with her recent promise of a speedy return to us.

MATHEMATICAL students are rejoicing at present in the possession of one of McMaster's professors. In the absence of our regular teacher, Miss McKay, the Moulton classes are progressing favourably, and heartily enjoying their work, under Prof. McKay. The only drawback is a dread suspicion that the teacher is not as well satisfied with his students as they are with their teacher.

SHOPPING is said to be the delight of the average woman's life, and Moulton girls seem to share that characteristic of their sex. Every Saturday morning, rain or shine, a party sets out, accompanied by a much-enduring teacher, who spend the golden hours of the morning in a complete investigation of the Yonge and King St. stores. Sometimes they are bent on sober business, but oftener they are seeking for "something," concerning which all they know is that they never see it, but that meantime the money goes. The time rolls by until twelve o'clock, and then a tired but happy crowd board the Yonge St. car bound for home and luncheon. These shoppers may be identified anywhere by their unfailing good humour.

At our last Mission Circle, Mr. Telford, of McMaster University, kindly gave us a short report of the Detroit Convention. Beginning with the journey to Detroit, he took us with him through the most interesting of the meetings, giving us snatches here and there of speeches and reports of those who attended the convention. His talk was encouraging and profitable, affording us an idea of the work and spirit of the convention, which we should not otherwise have had. We were also very pleasantly entertained a week ago, by a lecture on "The Life, Manners, and Customs of the Chinese," by Mr. Hobson. Having spent his life in China, he is able to give many interesting incidents which show the characteristics of the people in a singularly clear, and often amusing, manner. Those who were present on that evening thoroughly enjoyed Mr. Hobson's lecture, for we were able to understand more fully how very little we do know about the condition of people in other lands, where they have not the light of the Gospel to lift them upward.
