edition shall be distributed as widely as possible, in the hope that by its effects it will prove a blessed commensuration of this festival (Cheers.) I especially rejuce to see the Duke of Argyle on this platform; and I will tell you why. Two of his ancestors laid down their lives on the scatfold for religious liberty; and one of them, when his spirit was about to wing its way to glory, uttered the memorable declaration. I due with a heart hatred of Popery". (Cheers.) When we see the aky, my friends, presenting fearful emens, and the lurid mass seems about to break, let us arise and gather round this Somety; and, in doing so, we may rest assured that the tempest when it has burst will leave us in enfuly, while civil and coclesiastical despotism shall have been driven away like chaff

before the wind (Cheers)

The Earl of Carlisle seconded the reso-I rion. I think, lades and gentlemen, it is well for us to be thus assembled. Our common Christianity, as far, at least, as it is likely to be represented here, does not exact or scarcely open to commerce, and islands now encourage many outward exhibitions of pomp and page entry. But if it does not, like that older faith of which it is the complement and consummation, lead forth its selemn dames by the brook of Sileans, or ascend, with the sound of the trumpets and the graduated song, the long flight of steps which conduct to the por-tals of the temple; if in its ordinary working its ministrations are principally to be found in acts of self-denying labour, or in the unos-tentations love with which it shines in the hearts of its worshippers, yet there are scasons when we may point to such assemblies deemer not yet come!—and till it comes and as the present, and feel that we, too, have wings its way, what dark abodes of superstiour festivals, our galas, our strains of triumph tion and cruelty must still remain,—what obthat there is a Christian as well as a Jowscene rites must still insult the face of heaish jubileo, and that the achievements of which we have this day heard the recital, and of which we are met to perpetuate the me-ladies and gentlemen, it such things exist, let mory, are not unworthy of lending another me call upon you to say whother they shall chord to the harp of David or the lyre of I-still continue. In the midst even of this our saiah. (Applause.) It cannot be necessary for me to offer any caution to an auditory like lections, these realines, should rise before us, the present not to include in a spirit of unand arouse us to increased zeal, hope, and due exultation. They will all feel primarily prayer, and their only trustworthy fruits, perthat the whole praise, and honour and victo-ty are due to the Omnipotent. (Hear.) this be the real trumpet-call of the Christian They will feel next that so far as He has jubilee. (Cheers) How long, I say, is the state of things, to which I have thus briefly these principally belong to the humble and aliaded, to continue? It we were not deallaborious agents and servants of the Society, ang-I hope I may say it without irroverence whether at home or abroad—to the travelling agent plying his unwearied round of visits, a thousand years, and a chousand years as a often among the listless and indifferent—to day, I might be tempted to say, let not the the secretary working at his desk—to the full centenary of the Bible Society be contranslator amid overwhelming intricacies of pleted before the whole world has become the idiom and of dialect—to the colporteur journeying under unkind skies, and often amid the unkinder menaces of his fellow-men-to the missionary, a name almost always a synonyme for exile, and often for martyr. It is to their persevering, often unobserved, and seemingly unrewarded labour that we are principally to trace on 8000 societies, and our 100 languages, and our 40,000,000 of co-puts (Cheers) This is indeed a magnificont result. Sinco the Society first assued from its single room, even as the original publishers and messengers of the gospel issued from their upper chamber to communicate glad tidings to the world, how continuous and how triumphant has been the progress of its conflict,—may I not add, of deliverance?—operations, how immense its field of hour, (Applause.) Yes, while the waters of the operations, how immense its field of le our, how unflagging the wing of that angel flies in the midst of heavon, having the ever- and we can scarcely read a leading arricle of upon the earth. [Applause ] It is not on scious press, which may not serve as an illusly the polished and cultured realms of Eu- tration and a text-book to the commentators of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and that debt-[hear, hear]-that Germany which has so much of kinmanship with us, both of formation and of Luther-[cheers]-Italy, pale and fair, sister of sorrow, with whom it holy calm on this occasion if we gave full oven this our jubiled strain of triumph, gavent to our sympathy. But, besides these, thering strength from resistance, and uxaliaall the antique and gorgeous Last, with its tion from depression, -mingling the prayers worm-out civilizations and obliterated dynass of earth with the hallelegalis of heaven-it is China, the awarthy Arabia, and the coal-black Africa,-together with that new world of America, which is entering into such noble and even the intense gloom which we now compension with the old in the Bible and missionary causes,—all, all of these—shores uprising rays of the coming glory (Loud scarcely open to commerce, and islands now appliance). What, then, my kind hearers, to to geography-are now welcoming the footprints of the messengers of peace, and drink- as I may be, on such majestic themes-what ing in the accents of Almighty love. [Cheers.] Xet, ladies and gentlemen, thrilling and glowing as the statement is of what has been done, and what is still doing, in this noblest of all undertakings, the sobriety and the force of the obligation which devolves upon us all, exact that it should not be concealed, how enormously much, remains still to ou done .-To what countless numbers, over what unmeasured spaces, has the message of the Roven,—how many altars of falso gods rock with elso may pass away and perish in a passin human victims! (Hear, hear.) Well, then, and perishing world,—its pleasures. legitimate and becoming jubilee, these recol- not be among the things which are doomed this be the real trumpet-call of the Christian with the work of him to whom " a day is as dominion of the gospel, and pagan darkness and infidel insanity have been swept away from its ransomed populations. (Cheurs.) But, though I teel most emplanically that with respect to the future it is not for man to feel assured, far less to dogmatise, and that the whole field of unfulfitled prophecy is by no means yet thrown open to tamiliar or prasumptuous access, yet, judging by the tenour of past predictions, and comparing them with their ascertained fulfilment, and comparing them, again, with the tenour of the predictions still remaining unfulfilled, I cannot resist the impression that the world around us may even now be big with the threes of crisis and (Applause.) th mystic Euphratea seem to be daily drying up, ported the resolution; being announced to er- and we can scarcely read a leading arricle of the meeting as a grandson of the man whose rope,-that Franco from which we derived on Bible controversy; while upon her off so much learning, cloquence, and, picty in scat of western empire Pome scoms to be reher exiled prinisters and subjects at the time doubling, though with somewhat of spasmodic energy-(cheers)-the cilorts of her prime. to which we are now in some degree repaying and refurbishing the weapons of her ancient armour; while infelchty scarrely over before exhibited such hold malignity, or superstition blood and character, the country of the Resuch shameless effrontery, or presteraft such formation and of Luther-[cheers]-Italy, subtle ambition; while through all of these, as bove all of three, "conjucting and to conwould seem to be hardly in keeping with the quet" all of these peaks the goapel summons, ties,-the easte-ridden India, the mysterious impossible not to think but that prophecy may touch upon its fulfilment, and the myateries of time be heaving to their completion; whom I have ventured to touch, all unworthy is the warning and admonition which they convey to all ct us? Is it not that, next to the great work of personal holiness, and of course in subordination to the immediate disties that belong to the position in which Providence has placed us, we ought to labour intently, as our opportunities and spheres of action permit, upon the sublime work of the world's emancipation; which we must all of us think will be the probable prelude and preparation for the world's final happiness; and, at least, it seems to me that we who are now here assembled shall be justified in embracing fully this conviction, that whatever elso may pass away and perish in a passing nomps, its corpires its heroism, its genius, its winning conliness and its dazzing grandeur, —as least, the work of the Bible Society will to the final dissolution of the passing and the perishing, but that it will leave its traces, ay, n the succeeding eternity (Applause.)

Josian Foaten, Esq, supported the resolution.

The Rev. Canon STOWELL moved the following resolution :-" That the Jubileo Fund be now regarded as open, and that all ranks and ages be invited and encouraged to contribute thereto with a liberality commensurate with the importance and inagni-ude of the objects contemplated " [Speech in our next]
The Rev Mr Brows, one of the secreta ries, said, before the resolution was seconded, he had some subscriptions to announce. It had been his intention to ask for £7000, but, unfortunately for his speed h, that amount had already been exceeded—[great cheers]—and he must now ask, therefore, for £10,000 Ho. then read the following list - F. Farmer, Esq., £1000; James Foster, Esq, £1000, Mr. Mills, M P., £500; Remington Mills, Esq., £500; the Marquis of Cholmandely. E100; R. C. Bovan, Esq., £105; J. Morloy, Esq., £100; W. Evans, Esq., M. P., £100, S. Gurnoy, Esq., £100; W. A. Hankey, Esq., £50; the Roy, J. C. Glyn, £50; G. Maryn, Esq., £50, &c., &c.

The Rev. W ARTHUR seconded the rese-

The Rev. Mr. CHARLES, of Wales, suptasting gospol to preach to them that dwell our intelligent, though on this point, uncon- first application for Bibles led, as had been