were dismiss'd. The next day their whole Body came within a quarter of a Mile of the Garrison desiring the English to come to them ; which they refused, saying, that they were sent from the several Governments to hear what they had to offer ; but assured them that if they came to them no injury should be offered. After a short consultation they comply'd, provided that the English would engage it in the Name of God. And then they sent in thirteen of their Chiefs, expecting the like number of English to be sent them. So soon as they met, the Commissioners demanded what they had to offer, who complimented them with the great satisfaction they had in seeing them in so peaceable a disposition, and that it was also the intent and desire of their hearts. It was then ask'd wherefore they made War upon the English ? Who replied, because of their Encroachments upon their Lands so far Westward as Cape-Nawagen, where two of their Men as they said were beaten to Death. Unto which 'twas answered, That that very Land was bought by the English, and that the Deeds from their Predecessors were ready to be shewn ; And admitting it was true what they said, that the English did so inhumanly beat two of their Indians, yet it was not justifiable in them (according to the Articles of Peace) to commence a War at once, without first making Application to the Government, who at all times were ready to do them justice.

This Conference being over, they propos'd a further Treaty ; which after some debate was resolved to be at Boston. They then moved for a
