LONDON, Friday, Jan. 7 .-- (C.A.P.) -Speaking at Keighley last night, Solicitor-General Rt. Hon. Stanley Buck- the supreme court decision, forcing the dissolution of the Union Pacific master made a statement on the armaments question which, in view of recent utterances from Lloyd George and Churchill, will be regarded as of the highest importance. He assured his vast audience that there wasn't even a rift, in the Liberal ranks on this issue. Their policy remained what it had always been namely in the first place, to preserve beyond risk the safety of ourselves and our dominions and to establish and maintain the ions and to establish and maintain the unassailable superiority of the fleet.

"At the same time and with no less emphasis they meant to make it plain that meither meant to make it plain that neither for aggrandizement nor aggression would they add a single unit to our naval strength. Their object was to show that as we wished only to maintain our own rights, so we did not seek to menace the rights of others, but desired goodwill and friendship to all. It was their hope that this policy, plainly expressed and pursued, would in the end exorcise the nightmare of suspicion and mistrust under the pressure of which the nations of Europe gasped deeply shock the very soul of Liberalism than that their party should accel-erate the rate of increase in armaments or lend themselves to the promotion of a scare between themselves and their fellow-citizens of Europe.'

A statement issued tonight by the C. P. R. states: C. P. R. states:

"The position this year is somewhat different from that of former years; 1913 was a year when large and comprehensive schemes for extensions, betterments and double-tracking the company's system were pushed. These schemes cannot be completed in a day or two, and must be carried to a certain point before further extensions. tain point before further extensions are undertaken, so that the expenditures estimated for in the western appropriations of 1914 are almost entirepropriations of 1914 are almost entirely confined for the present to the completion of track laying, etc., on grades

Mr. Bury said that under the direction of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy C. P. R. in 1913 was able to move such a large grain traffic so expeditiously, at a time when the great strain of moving the harvest came. The facilities provided in rolling stock were such that car requirements in other directions were able to be met promptly and other traffic moved currently as well as the grain.
