can possibly to much encourage such attempts, as a mutual inattention to the interests of each other. To divide, and thus to destroy, is the firt political maxim in attacking those, who are powerful by their u ion. He certainly is not a wife man, who folds his arms, and reposes himself at home, viewing, with unconcern, the slames that have invaded his neighbour's house, without using any endeavours to extinguish them. When Mr. Hampden's ship money cause, wours to extinguish them. When Mr. Hampden's ship money cause, for Three Shillings and Four-pence, was tried, all the people of England, with anxious expectation, interested themselves in the important decision; and when the slightest point, touching the freedom of one colony, is agitated, I earnessly wish, that all the ness may, with equal ardor, support their sister. Very much may be said on this subject; but I hope, more at present is unnecessary.

WITH concern I have observed, that two assemblies of this prowith concern I have observed, that raw alternolies of this province have fat and adjourned, without taking any notice of this act. It may perhaps be asked, what would have been proper for them to do? I am by no means fond of inflammatory measures; I detest them. I should be forry that any thing should be done, which might justly displease our fovereign, or our mother country: But a firm, modelt exertion of a free spirit, should never be wenting on public occasions. It appears to me, that it would have been sufficient for the assembly, to have ordered our agents to represent to the King's ministers, their sense of the suspending act, and to pray for its repeal. Thus we should have borne our testimony against it; and might therefore reasonably expect that, on a like occasion, we might receive the same assistance from the other colonies.
