I never shall forget that glorious motor-ride. My fears were temporari-ly forgotten, and the whole world ly forgotten, and the whole world seemed glad and rejoicing with us.

On, on we sped, along the smooth white roads—on into Arcadia.

The green meadows were a-blaze with dandelions. I loved the vigorous beauty

Among the young green of the trees the woodpigeons were cooing armorously to each other. Meadow larks were rising from the marches, and swallows were soaring up into the illimitable blue.

And down by the reeds along the river's edge, where the willow wands were sprouting, other little warblers fluttered. New life was on the marsh-
