Copies of the agreement in its proposed form have been forwarded to the various unions of the Building Trades Council for their approval.

Business agents of the Painters' and Decorators' Union report that approximately thirty new members were added to the well-attended meeting held last evening in the Musician's Temple.

Business accomplished by the Painters' and Decorators' Union at their international convention, held last week in Cleveland, was the raising of the salary of the president and the secretary-treasurer from $4000 to $5000, and the raising of the per capita tax from 30 to 40 cents.

The report of officials showed that the organization has now an international membership of 150,000, and excellent financial resources.

Paul Charbonneau is authority for the statement made to The World yesterday that the International Metal Polishers and Buffers Union, following reports from delegates to the recent International Congress convention at Windsor, that the International intended to give support, both moral and financial, against all organizations opposed to the international movement in Canada, decided by a vote of 65 to 15 to accept the Canadian National Union. So far there had been no talk of affiliating with the Canadian National Union.

James T. Gunn, business manager for the National Union Electrical Workers, stated that the World that ten days ago the membership of his national union was 630, but that since that time the membership had increased to 750, and that the union had been gathered into the national field, making a present total of 750 members.

Routine business at last evening's meeting of the Bricklayers' Union included the initiation of seven new members.

J. A. CALDER BREAKS WITH FREE TRADERS

flame Fears of prejudice provoked by the federal government, but he is a capable, determined man, a great organizer and a dauntless fighter, as in Manitoba thousands of Liberals will testify.

The new party, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King's opposition in this province is a negligible element. It is an organized group of men with the most feared contestant in the greatest political battle ever waged in Canada.

He said there were four fiscal schools—free, high protection, tariff for revenue only, and moderate protection. He did not believe in either of the first two, tariff for revenue only was a nuisance, and he stood solidly for moderate protection. It was fitting that Hon. Mr. Calder should make his statement of fiscal faith in Moose Jaw, for years the provincial Liberal government won their contests by introducing the federal economic issue into the provincial contests. They were playing provincial politics with a federal issue.

Some of its members, including Hon. J. A. Calder, have had for some years to take a national instead of a provincial view of the fallacy of free trade. In his declaration he made no attempt at evasion of the issue, and took definite issue with the federal government's platform too narrow and impracticable.

Speaks to Four Thousand.

Mayor S. Hamilton was chairman. Mr. Calder, in speaking in his own constituency, which elected him to parliament as a Unionist three years ago, dealt frankly with the tariff question, which featured also the prime minister's address.

Baker was under sentence of one year and nine months and was wanted in Hamilton and London also. Detectives Hesse and Alexander of No. 9 were immediately on the search upon the arrival of the train, but they were unable to learn from the crew or the Kingston officer in charge anything definite about the point at which the escape was made, and they searched the whole line between the city and Weston without finding any trace. The prisoner was being taken here from Burwash.

TO START WORK ON LAYING MAINS

Pipes Have Been Allowed to Remain on Logan Avenue Over a Year.

The water mains which have been allowed to lay on Logan Avenue for over a year by the works department, at considerable inconvenience to the residents, has aroused the ire of the ratepayers, and an imperative demand has been made to the works commissioner to either lay the mains or remove them out of sight.

The lawn of Mr. Wright's residence, 583 Logan Avenue, is at present being used by pedestrians as a sidewalk, and a disagreeable odor arises from the pipes, particularly after a rainfall, owing to the accumulation of fruit and vegetable matter rotting in and around the pipes.

Alderman Richard Honeyford, ward councillor, has interested himself in the matter on behalf of the residents, pointed out to Works Commissioner H. C. Harris that the pipes stretch down the main, the need of which is the cause of an eye-sore to the neighborhood for over a year, and entail double labor in shovelling snow off the sidewalk in winter.

Mr. Harris, in a communication to Alderman Honeyford under date Oct. 23, stated that the contract would be let for laying the mains immediately, and that the work would be commenced in the near future.

"The delay," Mr. Harris stated, "up to the present time has been occasioned on account of his inability to get delivery of special castings which were necessary before the pipe line could be completed. These castings are now on hand and no further delay is anticipated."

As a result of the rummage sale recently held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society in Riverside Presbyterian Church, the large sum of $250 was realized towards the new church building fund. The congregation at its last meeting decided to undertake the support of a foreign missionary. Rev. L. I. Hunter, pastor, presided.

HIL IS HAVIN' HER DIVIDENDS CUT

GOING to a hospital is just like visitin' the poor, who you outwardly cheer with a basketful of crushed fruit, while inside you're registerin' grief at the empty coal bin, and you come away kinda sad, yet happy, because your own moonrind is stocked with necessities.

Same way with a hospital. You go there and push a crowd of swell asters at your sick friend and hang over a iron bed done in violent white long enough to spill regrets the way they're buffeted, and away you come overflooded with gratitude, because you don't need no thermometer to tell you are alive.

Buile me, I didn't know what gratitude was till I slipped in to see Hildegarde. I don't know exactly what happened to her, but she was goin' to the island or somewhere with a bunch and it seems somebody's starboard boom run afoul of their headlights, and not havin' mind present to yank in her tackle she was sapped a winder that busted her cervical vertebrae or somethin'. Anyways, I went to see her and there she was lyin' there in retrograde and a hospital nightie.

"Here I am!" she wheezed, when I breezed in. "You certainly are!" I says, kind of amazed at her sans so say, which showed that she'd been so far gone the angels had come more than half ways to meet her. Poor kid she shone looked wrecked and apopson-faced—if you know what I mean.

But apart from the awful feelin' is somethin' goin' to happen, like will somebody scream? A hospital is just like a elegant hotel with elevators (for visitors), and a piano "way off somewhere, which one of the nurses plays the patients to sleep on, while the rest of them fits around in snappy white uniforms and if you so much as turn over or clear your throat, a deigned quindone comes puzzevin' in to see that you don't need him. The one Hil is one of them swell-eyed physizes what looks like he's posin' for a ad for Spottless Tunes; he's a nice guy, tho.

But it's certainly a grand feelin' to vomoose out into routine action and inhale swell air and scenery, but home ain't home when you're a strip of weeks just dunnin' which time he'll be able to practice the sandvich system—that Hindoo philosophy bunk on eternal happiness and exemption from ills and blues—and I'll say she needs somethin' inspirin' to put her in the way of a hunky meal.

POOR GAS SERVICE AROUSES PROTESTS

Todmorden Residents Hold Indignation Meeting and Pass Resolution.

A public meeting of the residents of Todmorden was held in Torrens Avenue School last night to protest against the Consumers' Gas Company's service and the poor quality of gas supplied in the district.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That the Todmorden Ratepayers' Association defer action in connection with the Consumers' Gas Company until next spring, when, if a better service is not installed, a public meeting be called and definite action taken."

Amos Alpess, in a forceful address, scored the gas company for its bad service and failure during the past eight years to remedy the situation, and urged government control as the only solution.

Mr. Alpess pointed out that the protest was not against the cost of the illuminant, but the poor quality and lack of pressure.

"There has been enough money paid to the Gas Company by the users in the district to enable them to install a new mainline, the need of which is the cause of all the trouble," he declared.

J. Cameron, a member of the delegation waited upon by Mr. Armstrong, secretary of the company, on behalf of the association, said Mr. Armstrong could promise no immediate relief, and that the company was doing all it possibly could to give an adequate service.

Mr. Armstrong admitted that the service was poor, but until new mains were laid from Gerrard and Broadview no better service could be given, and also that on account of the high price of labor, the pipes laid down between the city limits and Todmorden in connection with a new service were carried away again by the company until there was an improvement in labor rates.

Conclusion, Mr. Cameron pointed out that the residents were paying for air and not for gas, as booster pumps were used to force the gas east and west, giving a good pressure in the city to the detriment of the northern district. He is a disgrace. George Self pointed out that with a gas bill of $5.54 for the month of October, the residents are paying for a gas bill of $5.54 in addition to the gas in order to illuminate the house and meals had to be cooked on the gas range in the afternoon in order to get sufficient pressure.

A lady complained it took half an hour to boil a small kettle. Many other complaints were recorded. P. P. Cooper occupied the chair.

YORK

Proportional Representation Is Urged for Next Election

Proportional representation was discussed in a very instructive and interesting way by Alexander D. Bruce, Mayor of Toronto, at the Labor Temple, Messrs. George Wilkie, Major Mulholland, J. C. Allan, A. B. Kerr, Charles C. Backley, Dr. Carcassodon, James G. Cullen, E. D. Ross, Frank Denton, Dr. O. G. Neimeyer of West Toronto, Robert Crawford of Weston and Mr. McVittie took part.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Dr. Carcassodon moved, seconded by Major Mulholland, that the executive of Toronto and York Liberal Association be requested to call a special meeting to consider the advisability of urging on the pending election on proportional representation that this system of voting be adopted in Toronto at the next general election.

This motion, when put by the chairman, Alexander MacGregor, was adopted unanimously, and the meeting urged that any representative that may be sent to Ottawa learn all he can and promptly report as to the success of this system of voting in Winnipeg at the last provincial election.
