MAINE MAN MAKES MONEY IN HUNTING FOXES BY AUTO

Shoreham, Jan. 27.—Canaan has proved to be a land of milk and honey to Guy Nelson, for within a year's time he has been able to graduate from the life of the ordinary farmer to the height of the coveted man that has attained a small fortune. He has recently purchased an automobile which he is using in hunting and trapping the fox.

Little more than a year ago, Mr. Nelson, who was living on a small farm in his wife about two miles from the village, one morning started through the woods to look at a trap that he had set for a red fox. To his surprise he found when he reached it a gray fox that he knew was worth around three figures. This would have been enough good luck for the ordinary farmer, but more was to come to Mr. Nelson. He continued on through the woods with his gray fox and was to meet his team in the road farther along.

When he came upon another of his traps he found in it a black fox. It was but a little time before this good luck was heralded over the whole part of the country. A few days later four buyers came to his house and bought the two foxes for around $3,000. Mr. Nelson then decided that if there were two foxes of these kinds in that vicinity there would be more. Two weeks later he found a fox hole and in company with a neighbor, dug out four small foxes that proved to be gray ones. These brought equally as good prices.

After More Foxes

It now came the time when Mr. Nelson decided that he would move to the village. He bought a small place on the outskirts and there began to hunt more foxes. He learned that a fox had been caught in a trap in a nearby town and immediately went to the place. He found that the fox's leg was badly mutilated and he immediately employed a surgeon and the leg was amputated and the care taken of him was such as would be afforded a person. The fox proved to be of the black type but was to go with three legs.

Mr. Nelson decided that he would start a fox farm. He bought this fox with the three legs and this made the first one for his farm. He dug down in the ground several feet, making a concrete bottom with concrete sides to the top of the ground. Around this he placed heavy wire fencing, with apartments for several hundred foxes. He began to catch red foxes and within two months had thirty besides his black one and three raccoons. Late last fall he sold his three-legged fox for over a thousand dollars, but still continued to breed the red ones.

Hunts by Auto

Mr. Nelson is about 35 years old and with part of his money has bought an automobile to do his hunting and trapping with and has made his home one of the best in the village. People look at him with envy and would like his secret of getting these foxes. It is said that he has natural ability in tracking a fox and by instinct can tell whether he has crossed the track of a fox. He makes his own preparation for attracting the foxes to him. He is able with this preparation when he is out in the woods to call a fox to him that may be some distance away. Mr. Nelson enjoys the work and his farm which already has cost him hundreds of dollars is getting ready for his new business in one of the places of interest in this part of the country. During the summer he had over a thousand visitors to the farm.

President's Wilson's Trust Message

The message itself, as read on Tuesday, the 20th, was in some respects the most statesmanlike of all President Wilson's utterances thus far. It was in perfect temper, lifted far above contention, and had the usual merit of being explicit while also philosophical. It found the opinion of the country on trusts and monopolies to be clear-cut and ready for action. "Can we have legislation, when successful, is always the embodiment of convincing experience and of the mature public opinion which finally springs out of that experience." The antagonism between business and government is over. We now about to give expression to the best business judgment of America, to that we know to be the business confidence and honor of the land.

A president continued to show that meant to have "easy and simple business readjustments, * * * nothing run up by the roots, no parts rent asunder which can be left in wholesome combination." The practical measures proposed would deal with interlocking recalcitrances; this would result in "independent industrial management working in its own behalf."

Next the president proposed to confer upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to regulate the financial operations of transportation companies, a measure, as he well says, that the country is ready to accept "with relief as well as approval." Next he asks "further and more explicit definition of the policy and meaning of the existing anti-trust law." This point he proceeds to set forth with unanswerable logic.

The next item in the programme is the creation of an interstate trade commission. Its need to the business world is admirably set forth. Finally, the president holds that prosecutions under the anti-trust law should not be directed against business and its organization, but against individuals who have been guilty of offences. Certain other questions and suggestions in the message are of great pertinence; but the points we have enumerated form the constructive programme offered by the president.

DOUBLE DEATH DUTIES

Ontario Law Becomes of Interest To English Investors

(Times Special Correspondence) London, Jan. 14.—A letter from "Exeter," published in all the important London and provincial papers this week, causing comment in Canadian investment circles, and many of the papers see that the grievance referred to had been remedied. The letter runs: "A word of warning should be given to the benefit of persons who may contemplate investing their money in the shares of companies whose head offices are in Toronto or elsewhere in the province of Ontario. Many such shares are held in this country and are transferred upon a London register, and it is not unlikely that in the event of the death of an English holder of such shares, they would have to be regarded as English assets, and it is the case that such shares have to be treated under English law. It may not, however, be generally known that duty will be claimed also by Ontario authorities and no return allowance of such duty will be made by the estate duty authorities in England. Consequently the beneficiaries of deceased will in such case be met with a double set of duties, upon the estate duty which is to be paid in Ontario, and the estate duty which is to be paid in England, but as being at the same time in Ontario, because the head office of such a company happens to be situated there. It is either fair or just that the crown should claim double duties but, such being the present state of the statutory law of the two countries, it is as well that the investing public should know it."

CANADIAN HYMNAL FOR ENGLAND

(Times Special Correspondence) London, Jan. 14.—The Canadian hymnal has been issued recently. A new edition of the hymnal has been issued recently and is not well received generally, as those who speak of it as a failure. A. C. Benson, son of a former bishop of Canterbury. The discussion elicited the statements that the Canadian hymnal is in many ways superior to the English publication and appeals are made to "the powers that be" to let this hymn book into England and have it adopted as the standard work for the English Church.

THE COST OF LIVING

To the Honorable Robert Laird Borden, Premier of the Dominion of Canada:

Dear Sir:—If the commission which you have ordered to enquire into the cost of living does its work in anything like an adequate manner, it should be an untold blessing to this country.

It is not a reproach in the manner of distributing the wealth of the community, that while the power of production has been multiplied more than ten-fold, and in some cases more than a hundred fold or even a thousand fold, while the opening up of this continent has added immensely to the natural resources of the people, at the same time there come periods in which a considerable part of the people are reduced to the terrible condition in which they have to beg, borrow, steal or starve.

Should there not, therefore, be the most earnest enquiry into the cause of this misarrangement of equity? Why should there be any want amid such a plethora of supplies? How is it that one part of society enjoys such a superabundance leaving to the rest only a very meagre support?

It has happened more than once in the history of this continent that just at the very time when there should have been the greatest prosperity, business has had to face disaster, and bankruptcy has come as an epidemic. And even at the present day, with all the agencies for the production and exchange of wealth in the greatest efficiency, more so than they have ever been in the history of the past, we are likely to be plunged into depression, with its heart-rending train of misfortunes.

In addition to all this, we see the debt of the country increasing continuously, the municipal debts, together with all the mortgages spread all over the country growing to gigantic figures. Is it not a proper subject of inquiry why it is that one part of the community should thus become so much indebted, and increasingly indebted, to some other part of the community?

While industry is striving by every possible method to add to the wealth of the country, what function are the land speculators fulfilling? Do they change the desert into a garden, harness into fertility and security into abundance, as industry is doing all the time? Verily, and most emphatically, they are doing nothing of the kind. Are they not striving to carry off some other man's crop, to gain wealth by the despoiling of honest industry, to impoverish and bankrupt their fellow men?

Should not your commissioners inquire as to the disastrous effect of land speculation, and try to suggest some adequate remedy. Is it not true that the great bulk of our taxation is so imposed as to penalize and discourage production and so as to encourage rapacious, predatory speculation? Is it not true that by placing the taxation on the producer we thus allow those who can appropriate the value of the land, which rises to such enormous figures in our large cities, to get all the benefits of society without any of its burdens, and that therefore all the burden falls on the industrious classes, so that industry is compelled, not only to support the government, but to support the exactions of the speculators and the ground lords besides.

If it is true, as is alleged, that with every increase in the population, the owners of the best sites can demand a greater and greater tribute from industry, thus dooming a large part of the people to inevitable poverty, should not the most earnest enquiry be directed to the propriety of concentrating more of the taxation on this particular, unearned value and also the propriety of removing the taxation from the food, the clothing, the tools and the furniture of the poor man's home?

Yours truly,
D. B. JACQUES.

THE MODERN CARPET OF BAGDAD

THERE are few people who do not know the story of the wonderful carpet on which the owner had but to sit, wish, to be at some place and, lo! immediately he found himself there.

Some agents of this nature would be appreciated by many a manufacturer in jumping the demand for his product into a thousand places, a thousand miles away from his factory. Apparently to such a man there is no means of "getting there" and placing his name and his goods right into that territory, except by slow, laborious bit-by-bit acquaintance—ship—and mouth-to-mouth testimonials.

But he has overlooked the modern Carpet of Bagdad.

It is Newspaper Advertising.

Fanciful you say? Did you ever hear of Edwards' Soups? Well, the genial old cook who forms the trade mark just jumped right from Ireland to a thousand places in Canada in a week—on the Carpet of Newspaper Advertising.

Ever hear of Tillson's Oats? The "braw Scott" who stands for this product stepped over night, as it were, from a small town in Ontario to practically every town and village in Canada.

Wrigley's Gum—Sunshine Furnaces—Comfort Soap—all have taken advantage of this Modern Carpet of Bagdad—Newspaper Advertising.

TO THE MANUFACTURERS OF CANADA:

If you have a name and a product that you wish placed in demand throughout Canada, take advantage at once of the modern carpet of Bagdad—Newspaper Advertising.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problem with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency.

A list of capable advertising agents will be sent you on request, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 304, Lonsdale Building, Toronto.

NEW FISH FOUND AT DEPTH OF WELL ON TO FOUR MILES

Paris, Jan. 29.—The Prince of Monaco's passion for oceanography has brought to light a specimen of a hitherto unknown species of fish, which was found in the Atlantic at the depth of three and three-quarter miles.

The depth at which it was found is several hundred yards lower than the lowest depths hitherto explored, and tends to prove the existence of other unknown races and species of deep-sea monsters at depths which have never been sounded.

The fish is very heavy about the head but the body diminishes rapidly in size towards the tail. It is covered with a peculiar form of scales embedded in the skin. The head is round and soft, with the appearance of having been flattened underneath; the eyes are extremely small, but visible, and the teeth are numerous and small. The fish is very pale and almost without color except for a grayish violet tinge in certain parts of the head and underneath the body. The inside of the mouth is a dark violet, almost black.

One of the important points of the discovery is to show that even the great depths of the sea are lighted by a feeble and diffuse light.
