A member of the Honorable Artillery Company, writing home from the front at Christmas, says: "It would seem that some chaps' people have only stopped short of sending a complete army and navy stores out to the poor recipients, who hardly know what to do with the parcels they have been snowed under with! However, the people at home need not worry much, as if the stuff cannot be used among ourselves, it goes to cheer the Christmas of some of the Tommies, and a more deserving lot never stopped the face of this earth. They are splendid fellows, these Tommies and the more I see of them, and the better I like them. I think they are the most happy, cheerful kind, hard-working fellows I have ever met. Nothing is too much trouble for them to do in the trenches or elsewhere—they are real comrades, and if this war has taught us nothing else it has taught us the worth of friendship. They care naught for danger, and to see them in the trenches calmly climbing over the back in broad daylight to go foraging for wood, fuel, water, etc., to make tea, and soup of it is a sight for the gods. They might be strolling about on the meadows at home, and the wonder is they never seem to get snuffed out on such jobs."

It is now related that about four years ago Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the Emperor William, spent a few days at Scarborough, and that his suite included Prince Minister, an admiral of the German navy. They appeared greatly interested in the town and its surroundings, carefully inspected the harbor, and took some drives along the coast.

THE GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S ATTEMPTS TO DISTORT FACTS ARE SHOWN UP

"The arguments by which Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg seeks to establish the two sides of this case are in fact contradiction of the plain facts."

"First, the German Chancellor alleges that 'England, in 1911, was determined to throw troops into Belgium without the assent of the Belgian government.' This allegation is absolutely false. It is based upon certain documents found in Brussels which record conversations between British and Belgian officers in 1906, and again in 1911."

"The fact that there is no note of these conversations at the British War Office or the Foreign Office shows that they were of a purely informal character, and that no military agreement of any sort was at either time made between the two governments. Before any conversations took place between the British and the Belgian officers it was expressly laid down on the British side that discussion of the military possibilities was to be addressed to the manner in which, in case of need, British assistance could be most effectively afforded to Belgium for the defence of her neutrality, and on the Belgian side a marginal note upon the record explains that 'the entry of the English into Belgium would only take place after the violation of our (Belgium's) neutrality by Germany.'"

Britain Gave Assurance She Would Respect Belgium's Neutrality

"As regards the conversation of 1911 the Belgian officer said to the British officer: 'You could only land in our country with our consent,' and in 1913 Sir Edward Grey gave the Belgian government a categorical assurance that no British government would violate the neutrality of Belgium, and that 'so long as it was not violated by any other power we should certainly not send troops ourselves into their territory.'"

"The Chancellor's method of misquoting documents may be illustrated in this connection. He represents Sir Edward Grey as saying he did not believe England would take such a step, because he did not think English public opinion would justify such action."

"What Sir Edward Grey actually wrote was: 'I said that I was sure that this government would not be the first to violate the neutrality of Belgium, and I did not believe that any British government would be the first to do so, nor would public opinion here ever approve of it.'"

"If the German Chancellor wishes to know why there were conversations on military subjects between British and Belgian officers, he may find the reason in a fact well known to him, namely, that Germany was establishing an elaborate network of strategic railways leading from the Rhine to the Belgian frontier through a barren, thinly populated tract. The railways were deliberately constructed to permit of a sudden attack upon Belgium, such as was carried out in August last."

"This fact alone was enough to justify any communications between Belgium and the other powers on the giving of that there would be no violation of Belgian neutrality, unless it was previously violated by another power. On no other footing did Belgium ever have any such communications."

"In spite of these facts the German Chancellor speaks of Belgium as having thereby 'abandoned and forfeited' her neutrality, and he implies that he would not have spoken of the German invasion as a 'wrong' had he then known of the conversations of 1906 and 1911."

The Imperial Chancellors Code of Ethics.

"It would seem to follow that according to Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg's code, wrong becomes right if the party which is to be the subject of the wrong foresees the possibility, and makes preparations to resist it."

"Those who are content with older and more generally accepted standards are likely to agree rather with what Cardinal Mercier said in his pastoral letter: 'Belgium was bound, in honor, to defend her own independence. She kept her oath. The other powers were bound to respect and to protect her neutrality. Germany violated her oath. England kept hers. These are the facts.'"

"In the second part of the German Chancellor's thesis, namely, that Germany 'took her responsibility toward the neutral states seriously,' he alleges nothing except that 'he spoke frankly of the wrong committed by Germany' in invading Belgium."

A NEGLECTED COLD

WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise plagues of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearson, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. M. Burns Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

LET THE HOUSEWIFE DANCE AND IT WILL LIGHTEN LABORS OF THE HOME

MARY PORTER BEEGLE
"Everybody should cultivate dramatic motion, should train the body for wholesome self-expression of joy, happiness and kindred feelings," said Miss Mary Porter BeeGLE, director of physical training at Barnard College, as in Greek drapery she poised gracefully upon her bare toes, the embodiment of her own teaching. "And dancing," she continued, "is the key to the situation, to practically all situations having a beneficial side. Women, and men as well, should co-ordinate dancing with everything they do in life—the walk, the pose, the gesture and even work. The latter thought does not mean that I would have a woman dance and knit or sew at the same time; but I do mean that dancing would lighten her labors until they no longer would be tasks. What I wish to convey is the truth that following some wholesome activity, which stimulates both the body and the mind, work becomes more in the nature of a pleasure than a duty."

that England had not agreed to stand out of it. His sincerity did not stand the test. The sincerity of the German Chancellor's professions to the American correspondent may be brought to a very simple test, the application of which is more apposite because it serves to recall one of the leading facts which produced the present war."

"Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg refused the proposal which England put forward, and in which France, Italy and Russia concurred, for a conference at which the dispute would have been settled on fair and honorable terms without war. If he really wished to work with England for peace why did he not accept that proposal?"

"He must have known, after the Balkan conference in London, that England could be trusted to play fair. Herr Von Jagow had given testimony in the Reichstag to England's good faith in those negotiations."

"The proposal for the second conference between the powers was made by Sir Edward Grey with the same straightforward desire for peace as in 1912 and 1913. The German Chancellor rejected this means of averting the war. He who does not will the means must not complain if the conclusion is drawn that he did not will the end."

"The second part of the interview with an American newspaper correspondent consists of a discourse upon the ethics of the war. The things which Germany has done in Belgium and France have been placed on record by those who have suffered from them, and who know them at first hand. After this it does not lie with Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg to read to the other belligerents a lecture upon the conduct of the war."

"In his address at Cardiff, to which Sir Edward Grey refers in the above statement, Premier Asquith said: 'In a communication to the German government in 1912, regarding their future policy, Great Britain declared that she would neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack upon Germany. But that was not enough for German statesmanship.'"

"Germany wanted us to go farther and pledge ourselves to absolute neutrality in the event of Germany being engaged in war. To that demand there was but one answer, and that was the answer which the government gave."

"The Oxford professors and readers have decided to refund to the University a part of their stipends for 1915 in consequence of the serious financial troubles now prevailing. A scheme will be decided upon, as the stipends and the private circumstances vary considerably."

STEAMER SUNK BY SCHOONER IN COLLISION

Freighter Went Down Within Ten Minutes After Being Struck.

CREWS TOOK TO BOATS; ONE LIFE LOST

Schooner Hit Steamer Head-on Making Hole In Heavier Craft Amidships

New York, Jan. 26.—In a collision near the Fenwick Shoals Lightship early today, the American-Hawaiian line freight steamer Washington was sunk and the American schooner Elizabeth Palmer, which rammed her, was abandoned with decks awash, a floating derelict. One life was lost, that of a water tender. The other fifty-three persons, comprising the officers and crews of the two colliding vessels, were landed in New York to-night by the Old Dominion Line steamer Hamilton, arriving here from Norfolk, which picked them up near the scene of the accident, about twenty miles southwest of the Delaware Breakwater.

The Washingtonian sank within ten minutes after the schooner struck her and all hands on both craft were ordered to the boats. H. Moyer, a water tender on Washingtonian was missing when the men were mustered for roll call on the decks of the rescuing ship. He was seen shortly before the men took to the lifeboats, and it is presumed by his mates that he went below for some of his effects and was caught by the rushing waters."

According to Captain George A. Carlisle, who was in command of the schooner, the accident happened about 3.30 a. m.

The schooner under full sail, was headed southwest by south, and making about eight knots per hour when the Washingtonian was sighted. "It was evident that the steamer was moving in a direction that would have taken her across our bows and that our lights were seen too late to avoid us," said Captain Carlisle. "We struck the Washingtonian head-on making a hole in her almost amidships, the force of the impact smashing in the bow of the schooner. We immediately broke away, and went ahead about a mile before our course was changed. We saw the Washingtonian go down, after remaining afloat for about ten minutes. While there was somewhat of a heavy sea running, the wind was comparatively light, and only a light haze in the air. Thirteen men and one woman, the wife of John Andrews, the steward, were aboard. We took to the lifeboats as soon as our decks were awash, and were picked up two hours later by the Hamilton, which had responded to the wireless call for assistance sent out by the Washingtonian."

The Washingtonian had a crew of forty men aboard. She left Honolulu bound for Delaware Breakwater, on December 20, with a full cargo of sugar, passing through the Panama Canal January 18. The value of the ship and cargo is placed at $1,500,000. Captain Carlisle valued the Elizabeth Palmer at $125,000.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty)

A safe, reliable home-treatment for the quick removal of superfluous hairs from your face or neck is as follows: Mix a stiff paste with some water and powdered talc, apply to objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This simple treatment is unailing and no pain or inconvenience attends its use, but to avoid disappointment be certain you get genuine delatone.

CREW RESCUED FROM SCHOONER CELIA F. LANDED AT HAVANA

Havana, Jan. 26.—The steamer Atenas, from Boca Del Toro, landed here today Captain Godfrey and his wife and six members of the crew of the American schooner Celia F., which was wrecked off Cape San Antonio, January 23. The shipwrecked crew was rescued by the schooner Mel bourne P. Smith, and transferred to the Atenas. The Celia F. sailed from Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, December 12, for Cienfuegos with lumber.
