MONDAY EVENING, SEPT. 1, 1878.

Blind Politicians.

Justice is blind, but that is no excuse for blindness on the part of its officers.

Messrs. Gibson and Gray, of the Portland Police, appear to have learned as little on the day of the bloody riot at Hampton as two blind men. By their own confession they saw and heard roughs who were evidently bent on mischief and did not take the trouble to ascertain their names. They heard pistol shots, and never imagined that anybody would be shot. They were told that a man had been mortally wounded, and yet they never thought of adding to secure the man who fired the fatal shot.

They rode to town with the roughs who had been engaged in the riot, and took no pains to ascertain their names and residences. Some of them they have often seen at York Point and elsewhere, and yet they have no idea who they are nor where they can be found.

Now, if these officers had eyes, if they had the instincts of real policemen, they would have made a catalogue of the roughs who arrived at Hampton, noting down names, nicknames and distinguishing marks that would have led to the easy identification of every man of them. The officers have made several humiliating confessions before the Coroner. They have confessed that they did not even try to do anything for the preservation of peace, that they did not know what was going on around them, did not try to discover the names of the roughs in the party, did not do anything, in short, that live officers of the law should have done.

Our policemen are so used to the practice of waiting until riotous individuals got helplessly drunk that it did not occur to them to interfere while the Hampton rioters were yet sober enough to throw stones. Supt. Gibson should have put himself at the head of the local officers and shown them how riots are suppressed.

The Law Commission.

A general feeling of disappointment prevails among the members of the legal profession on account of the action of the Government to put Mr. Fred A. Barker on the Commission to codify the laws of New Brunswick. Mr. Barker's presence on the Commission would have given it great weight, and the profession had expected his appointment.

Commissioners are good lawyers; but one is the Attorney General's partner, another is a Member of the Assembly, and another holds a snug office already.

The Government would have done a more popular thing by making one of the appointments an office-holding circle. It is said that the Attorney General is afraid that Mr. Wedderburn will demand his office, and that he is afraid, Judge Skinner will enter the House and grasp at the Attorney General's commission.

where liquors were sold at or about the station, but believe that the bar room where the tragedy occurred must alone be accountable for the sad event.

Your informant must have surely meant some other circumstance, or else have misrepresented the case sadly. I took the supplies, refreshments, etc., to the grounds for the party and returned them again what was left, and must have said that I cannot think any spirituous liquors were conveyed to or from the grounds the day in question. I say in respect of the St. Joseph Society, who were orderly and quiet and peaceable, and as a party respectable, and although not myself a son of temperance, nor a member of any temperance organization, yet I would not take liquor to the grounds for any picnic, nor allow my team to do so, your informant to the contrary notwithstanding. Respectfully yours, &c., T. G. HARRIS.

Hampton, Aug. 30.

Nov. Scotia News.

Sunday's storm was severely felt at Sheet Harbor, N. S., and vicinity. Three newly erected churches were blown down, and about thirty barns have been demolished. Several schooners are ashore, and some will be a total loss. As quoddy, the new Catholic chapel, just completed, was blown down.

Mr. John B. Gray, a Post Office official in Halifax, has been arrested and lodged in gaol charged with being a defaulter to the amount of five to seven thousand dollars. The defalcations extend over a period of several years, and were discovered by Mr. Dewey, P. O. Inspector. Gray had full charge in the money office, and was accustomed to draw checks when he required cash. He acknowledged being a defaulter, but not to so large an amount.

Mallman, who recently murdered his wife in the woods near Bridgewater, was examined on Thursday before the Magistrate. The chief witness against him is his daughter, aged twenty. She testified to quarrels and blows for years past; to the prisoner's misconduct with other women, etc.; that prisoner was being a defaulter, but not to so large an amount.
