READING.

BY LOUISA BUSHNELL.

The earth brings sunshine now and rain
That morning of the year;
And cheapest account by mists that keep
She smiles to find herself so wooed.
With, now and then, a tear.

The topmost fastness of the hill
Has let the winter go;
The happy-hearted little rill
No longer saith so low.
To meadow-hushed with snow.

The birds let fall their new-born strains
I see no frost above;
And many a shadow wild with beams,
And many a wind-kissed blossom seems
To say a word for love.

What is there in the tender air
To thrill me like a dart?
It quickens places poor and bare,
And every covert sweet and fair,
Except one maiden's heart.

O, are such changeful gleams of light
Made only to beguile?
Then, I am but a foolish wight,
To be so glad because, last night,
The thin moon lit the willow smile.

But O, when ice and snow relent,
And every coldest thing
Might set, perchance, one more rapture
And melting into warm consent
Afloat all my heart with Spring!

Cities in Civilization.

Dr. Lew. H. Harvey in Maritime Monthly for May:

Phœnicia, the oldest of all trading communities of which we know anything, was long a bright spot amid the general gloom; and from its two queenly cities, Tyre and Sidon, civilising influences went forth over the world. The commerce of Tyre reached almost every corner of the world, as then known. Her keels furrowed the blue waters of the Mediterranean in all directions, leaving no part of its coasts unexplored, no portion of its natural riches neglected, and rendering it less feared and dreaded by others, a safe and useful watery way. Eastward the arms of her commerce reached the interior of Asia, and the dwellers on the Euphrates, the Tigris and the Indus sent their rich contributions to the stores of Tyrian merchants. From the African desert, the banks of the Nile, the south coast of Britain, the shores of the Baltic, the warehouses of this queen of the Mediterranean were filled with merchandize; and there was scarce a nation on the globe to whom the Phœnicians were not benefactors, and by whom the ships of Tyre and Sidon were not hailed as messengers of peace and good will. Afterwards Grecian power arose, and Athens and Corinth became rivals of Tyre and Sidon, but still benefiting the world by their rivalry and advancing the interests of civilization. But as these cities advanced in population, they found it necessary to plant colonies along the Mediterranean shores. In this way Carthage, an off-shot of Tyre, rose to be the Western queen of the Mediterranean, the great rival of Rome, and Syracuse became the greatest port in Sicily. Carthage, Corinth and Athens all fell beneath the powerful arm of Rome; but with all her tyranny and grim cruelty, old Rome did a mighty stroke of work in the world's progress. Roman armies were the pioneers of civilization, all over western Europe, piercing the forests and swamps of Germany, France and Britain, and laying down those gigantic roads which spread, as a great network, over the known world. Roman commerce, too, was world-wide. In the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, and the Indian Ocean, merchant-ships of Rome covered the waters, and by the ties thus established, Europe, Asia and Africa were linked together in mutual independence. When the "star of the empire" passed from Rome, other great cities arose and found a wider field than ever for their beneficial exercise. The great Republics of the middle ages arose, and Florence, Genoa and Venice battled to eclipse the old glories of Tyre, Corinth and Carthage. Civilization was travelling westward, and a young Europe was advancing with giant strides; and soon, on the very shores where once Tyrian merchants had purchased amber from barbarous tribes, the Free Cities of Germany, more, and far outshone old Tyre and Sidon in the skill of their manufactures and the vastness of their commercial speculations. But with circumnavigation of Africa and the discovery of America, a new era was ushered in. The glory and importance of the Mediterranean were eclipsed, when once a watery highway to India was discovered. It had played its part in the world's history, but now the great human march took another direction. The Old World poured its teeming populations upon the shores of the New; and history opened a new page in her mystic volume.

Thus then the cities of the old world were most important agents in advancing the cause of civilization. They were mainly dependent on commerce for their prosperity; and by linking together continent and island, and distributing over the earth the productions of nature, art and industry, they at once promoted human brotherhood and aided powerfully in the circulation of new ideas. When we turn to the cities of the modern world, we find a marked contrast, in one respect, to those of former ages—we see that their origin may be traced mainly to the genius of labor. Take England as an illustration of this; and it is evident that Anglo-Saxon industry has built her great cities and given her the supremacy which she wields. Manufacturing skill and energy have covered the land with those vast structures which everywhere meet the eye. The Norman conquest introduced the Feudal System into England, by which the vassals and retainers were grouped around the baron's castle for protection and employment. But very early industry erected her pavilion and exchange here. The swarthy mechanic who was employed in constructing the proud baron's chain-mail, his casque, his banner and plume, and the trader who was bringing the rich argosies of the east to minister to the idleness and luxury of prince and noble, gradually grew up into a powerful and wealthy class—the burghers, the traders, mechanics, manufacturers and merchant-princes of England. These have been largely the founders of England's greatness, and the architects of her liberties. These "captains of industry," with their subjects, founded the manufacturing and commercial cities which have now grown into such huge dimensions. Gradually the vassals gathered to these seats of labor met with its reward, and began to independence. Union was found to be strength; and these industrial masses became powerful and wealthy; and able to wring charters, guilds, and protection from kings, and to cope with haughty barons, who despised their birth but were unable to curb their power. Thus freedom grew up on English soil. Every reign gave to its citizens a more commanding position. The power of kings and the nobles declined, until the town superseded the village, and trade gave the death-blow to feudalism, as the cities enlarged and improved, and were filled with wealthy traders, independent manufacturers, and sturdy workers and artizans.

Apartment Houses.

The pioneer apartment houses in New York are the well-known Stuyvesant Buildings; the first, in Eighteenth street, having been opened in the fall of 1870, and the second in Thirteenth street, the following spring. Both are large, massive, and handsome buildings, finished throughout in a style at once rich and modest. The apartments, some of six, others of ten rooms, including kitchen and servants' rooms, are designed for strictly independent house-keeping, in good but not extravagant style.

The lack of elevators detracts somewhat from the value of the apartments; still they have never failed of steady occupation by those seeking a rare experience as a successful hotel manager, a genius for organization, ample means, and untiring vigilance in the carrying out of his plans. Thurnsuit is an establishment which may well be considered a model, since it secures the economy of multiple table and co-operative living, with the atmosphere of home, and combines all the advantages of English exclusiveness, and solid elegance, with the utmost independence in all that pertains to individual life. It is, in fact, a nest of elegant homes, each distinct and thoroughly secluded, yet all provided for with the elaborate machinery and systematic service of a first-rate hotel.

The Grosvenor was a success from the first. It opened with all its rooms leased for terms of years, while scores of desirable tenants eagerly enrolled themselves as candidates for the first vacancies that might occur.

While these first-rate adventures were demonstrating the need of apartment houses for the very rich, and the willingness of good families to adopt the style of life which they call home, not a little progress was made toward supplying with similar homes the classes less bountifully favored by fortune—not progress enough to make housekeeping and home-life available to the multitude, but quite enough to give a clear indication of what the future New York dwelling is likely to be.—Scribner for May.

Jules Verne's new story, "The Mysterious Island," is continued in the May number of Scribner's, with which number a new volume of this magazine is begun. Edward King has another "Great South" chapter, profusely illustrated. "Adam," an interesting story by Henry James, Jr., is begun, and will be concluded in June; Mrs. Spofford has a touching story, entitled, "At Last;" and there is a graphic sketch by R. H. D. of "The Doctor's Wife." Mr. Richardson's illustrated paper on "The New Homes of New York" tells and suggests much about the "flat" system of living. Mr. Stedman discusses "Tennyson;" and Mr. Schumacher describes the lately discovered "Silver Desert" of South America. Dr. Holland, in Topics of the Time, writes about "Star Lecturing," "The Great Temperance Movement" and "Political Morality." The Old Cabinet contains "A Crooked Line" and "The Woodspurge." The Etchings this month are enlarged to four pages, and Home and Society deals entirely with the fashions.

Lawson's Rheumatic Liniment.

THIS invaluable Liniment has the extraordinary property of affording immediate relief in all cases of Rheumatic and other pains, and suffering from Felons, Salt Rheum, &c., and a faithful trial will result in permanent cure.

The following are a few TESTIMONIALS proving the great efficacy of this Liniment:—

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 2nd, 1873.

Mr. A. Lawson: Dear Sir,—I have used your Liniment with a good deal of benefit, and feel pleasure in recommending it to others for the use for which it is intended.

Yours, &c.,
Rev. J. PARSON.

ST. JOHN, June 4, 1873.

To Abiel Lawson, Esq.: Dear Sir,—I have been much troubled with Rheumatism, and could get no relief till I procured a bottle of your Liniment. I am happy to recommend it to those similarly afflicted.

Geo. M. ROBERTS.

Mr. A. Lawson: Dear Sir,—It affords me great pleasure to state that your Liniment was the means of curing me of a severe attack of rheumatism, two or three applications having removed the soreness completely. I am therefore enabled to speak highly of its virtues.

LEVI H. YOUNG.

Having proved the efficacy of your medicine while suffering from Brownlitis, in a painful form, I take much pleasure in expressing my sincere appreciation of your Liniment as a family medicine.

ROBERT J. ARMSTRONG.

[Dated] 1873.

Abiel Lawson, Esq.: Dear Sir,—For a number of months I had been much troubled with Rheumatism, and tried many of the cures recommended, but could find none to suit, till I got a bottle of your Liniment. A few applications have made a perfect cure.

SAMUEL NEATBY.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 2d, 1873.

For some time I have had Ague in the face, and could get no relief until I got Lawson's Rheumatic Liniment, which made a perfect cure. I recommend it to all.

J. H. CROSBY.

Dear Sir,—I have for years suffered with periodical Neuralgia, and have tried many remedies for the disease but without satisfying effect. About three months since I tried your Liniment, using it externally and internally, and am rejoiced to say that I have not since felt the touch of my old complaint. Your medicine deserves its name, and after repeated trials I can say no other is the best in existence.

Yours truly,
JOHN P. LAWSON.

St. John, N. B., June 6, 1873.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 9th, 1873.

Mr. Abiel Lawson: Dear Sir,—I was so severely afflicted with neuralgia in the face, that I was unable to use my right hand. I procured a bottle, and made one application, which had the effect of removing all pain and soreness in one night. I have not since been troubled with neuralgia, and I consider your medicine superior to anything extant for cases of this kind.

Truly yours,
Wm. B. ROSS.

N. B.—I had previously used three or four different kinds of Liniment, neither of which gave any relief.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 9th, 1874.

Mr. Abiel Lawson: Dear Sir,—Having just recovered from a most severe attack of Rheumatism, (from which I suffered for four weeks,) I feel bound to testify to the very gratifying effect of your Liniment, which has had the effect of relieving me in a few days. I therefore, dear Sir, say, that I fully believe your mixture the best remedy in use for similar cases.

I am, dear Sir, yours, very truly,
THOS. W. B. TURNER.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 9, 73.

Mr. A. Lawson: Dear Sir,—Having experienced much benefit from the use of your Liniment some time ago, I procured a bottle of your Liniment. I made four or five applications, which have entirely removed the soreness. My breast is now entirely well.

Yours truly,
PETER SWEET.

Your Liniment has proved of great benefit to me, when applied for Rheumatism, and always gives satisfaction.

FRANCIS QUIBLEY.

Abiel Lawson, Esq.: Dear Sir,—Having been troubled for some time with Rheumatism, I was advised to try your Liniment. I did so, and found it to be all it was recommended. I advise all who are troubled in this way to try your Liniment.

THOS. F. TRUEMAN.

To Mr. Lawson: This certifies that I have used Lawson's Liniment for different purposes, and consider it the best article in use of the kind, and can cheerfully recommend it to the public.

THOS. P. TRUEMAN.

PROSPECTUS.

ABOUT 1st May next, there will be issued in St. John the first number of an eight-page Illustrated Comic Paper, under the name, QUIP. It is the intention of the management to continue its publication once every fortnight thereafter, with a view of making it a weekly as soon as public encouragement shall be warranted by the support afforded to it.

QUIP will be the organ of no party of either Church or State. It will not be found in religious, political, social, or other matters which it may from time to time have occasion to deal with, its motto being, Ridentem dicere verum quid vetat? but it will pursue its principles, sentiments or acts, at the same time avoiding offensive personalities and respecting private character.

Those who desire to see QUIP maintain a first-class position amongst the periodicals of Canada, will find it to all the Editor by contributions from pen and pencil—brevity and point being kept well in view. Sketches embracing suitable subjects for cartoons are solicited, and will on approval, be faithfully reproduced by our engraver.

QUIP will be printed at the establishment of Messrs. J. & A. McMillan. Its title, or first page, will be handsomely illustrated, the centre being bordered by advertisements, for which there are eighteen spaces, ranging from about three to one and a half inches in length. A portion of the inside columns will be set apart for advertisements, but not more than two inside pages will be, at any time, devoted to these purposes, the remainder being occupied by reading matter and cartoons by other illustrations.

The Subscriber is aware that the undertaking requires experience, good taste and money to carry it on successfully. His connection with the Press, both in St. John and elsewhere, has supplied him with the former, and he always proposed the second, and hopes so to combine the two in the Editorial management of QUIP as to deserve and secure the third.

TERMS.

QUIP will be $1.25 a year, payable in advance. Copies sold to any address in the City, $1.50. Single copies 5 cents. Clubs of Country, $1.25. Single copies will be liberally dealt with on application.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Display advertisements on title page—outside—$1.00 per inch, according to space, and position ordered. Single insertions $1.00 to $2.00. There are 19 spaces only on "inside."

For second, seventh, eighth and eighth (outside) space, one square or inch space, $25 a year; single insertions, $1.50 per square.

Reading notices, 10 cents a square $2.60 a line per year, and 15 cents a line per single insertion.

No pay card additional will be charged for choice of position on second, seventh and eighth pages.

All business communications to be addressed "Editor QUIP, St. John, N. B."
